Blended Bliss

DELICIOUS AND NUTRITIOUS SMOOTHIES FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

FAMILY FEATURES

Looking for a healthy, convenient and delicious breakfast boost, afternoon refuel or sweet treat? If so, break out the blender and whip up a delicious and nutritious smoothie. Made with fruits and vegetables, smoothies provide important nutrients that our bodies need. When prepared with chocolate milk, they can also be an excellent source of protein — and a tasty treat for kids and adults alike.

“Chocolate milk is a delicious and nutritious base for smoothies because it not only contains protein and minerals, it also provides calcium and vitamin D, which are essential for bone health,” said registered dietitian Rebecca Scritchfield. “Plus, combining a nutrient-rich option such as TruMoo Chocolate milk with fruits and vegetables like bananas, berries and kale is a great way to get kids to consume the nourishment they need, all in an enjoyable treat.”

Made with fresh white milk — sourced from your local dairy — pure cocoa and just enough natural sugar to make it taste great, TruMoo Chocolate milk is delicious whether it’s a smoothie base or enjoyed on its own. And with no high fructose corn syrup and no artificial growth hormones, you can feel great about serving it to your family.

If you’re not sure what to put in your smoothie, you can get creative with the ingredients you already have on hand. If you’re a fan of PB&J sandwiches, simply combine chocolate milk with bananas, peanut butter and jelly for a delicious take on the classic lunch staple.

Trying to get your kids to eat their veggies, such as kale, is easier when they’re disguised in chocolate-y goodness. And if you’re looking to satisfy your sweet tooth, combine low-fat brownies, ice and chocolate milk.

Each of the following single-serving recipes shows you how deliciously easy it is to create a unique and flavorful smoothie to fit any craving. For each recipe, combine ingredients in a blender, mix until smooth and frothy, and serve.

For more delicious recipes, visit www.TruMoo.com, or look for TruMooMilk on Facebook, Twitter and Pinterest.

Chocolate-Berry Blast

- 1 cup TruMoo Chocolate milk
- 1 cup frozen mixed berries
- 1 tablespoon golden flaxseed meal

Cookies ’n Cream Smoothie

- 1/2 cup low-fat fudge brownies or low-fat chocolate cookies, coarsely broken
- 1 cup TruMoo Chocolate milk
- 1 cup ice cubes

Fuel Up Smoothie

- 1 1/2 cups TruMoo Chocolate milk
- 1/2 cup baby kale

- 1 tablespoon almond butter

Banana PB&J Smoothie

- 1 cup TruMoo Chocolate milk

- 2 tablespoons low-fat peanut butter

Tips: For a colder smoothie, freeze banana chunks one day ahead. If you have a nut allergy, omit peanut butter.

Incredible Ingredients Make the Smoothie

Besides its creamy goodness, the best thing about a smoothie is the ability to create your own culinary masterpiece. Grab the kids and combine some of these tasty ingredients with chocolate milk for a flavor that’s 100 percent unique and completely satisfying.

The joys of aging: smoothies, sturdy flip flops and hot flashes

I haven't joined the cool kids with the kale and the coconut water, but I am into the smoothie. Mine is what I call the Old Geezer. Frozen strawberries and blueberries. Greek yogurt. Hemp hearts (for my digestion), magnesium powder (for my legs) and tart cherry juice (for my joints). Good Lord, what has become of me?!

My body is not falling apart and I'm healthy, but I'm pretty sure when I was 25, my ankles were not stiff when I got up in the morning.

And when I was 25, I wouldn't have invested $80 in a pair of flip flops. I prided myself on my shoe collection and $80 could snag me plenty of cute flip flops. My sturdy flops with arch support were worth the investment. Two summers strong now and they still feel sooooo good. And no more foot cramps.

When I was younger and worked with women who were more mature, I didn't understand some of their conversations. I'd fit right in now. Ah, the circle of life.

I've come a long way from a donut and Dr. Pepper for breakfast. The evolution of no breakfast to Greek yogurt with granola makes me think I'm hippie cool. Then I learn that even that is not a healthy way to start my day. Jeepers, give a girl a break.

Then recently something happened that I thought never would or at least not yet. Sitting at my computer typing away like normal, I broke out in a sweat. My body felt warm for a minute or two and then it was gone. Maybe if I was writing erotica, I could chalk it up to a really great scene, but writing a piece on how to raise your credit score doesn't really steam things up.

It had to have been a hot flash. Since it has now happened more than once, these odd warm sweaty moments from out of the blue, I've concluded it to be true. The wisdom of Facebook suggests cutting back on sugar will help.

So I experimented. The only soda I drink now is "white soda," no caffeine but plenty of sugar. When I sucked the sweet stuff all day, I had sweaty episodes. When I didn't, I didn't. Hmmm. Is it all in my head?

This week (if I muster the courage), I will embark on the scariest journey yet of my fifty years: A sugar detox. (That has me breaking out in a sweat just thinking about it.) I've jumped out of an airplane and I've walked across the hot coals for the Tony Robbins Firewalk, but no sugar? That's gonna take some real grit.

Many a friend has touted the benefits of saying bye-bye to the pretty white stuff, and that the first couple days are the hardest. I'm already negotiating with my husband: "Fruit has sugar. I can have that right? I will give up the cookies, but I can eat berries, yes?"

I think if I laid off soda and sweet treats, that would be enough. The experts say that my body will actually let go of the cravings if I do the detox. I find that unfathomable. So that is why I will do it.

Years ago I gave up Oreos for Lent (I loved DoubleStuff) and now an Oreo tastes yucky to me. So this detox thing may work. It's a crap shoot. I may become one of those green smoothie kind of people. Or I may revert to donuts and Dr. Pepper. All bets are off. Please send me strength (but don't send me soda.)

Kelly Epperson Simmons now eats asparagus, so never say never. Write info@kellyeperson.com.

I like... summer, and everything associated with it

I like summer rain. Not at noon when everyone wants to be outside in the sunshine swimming, if you are lucky enough to be at the beach.

But after the sunsets, when the world is dark and lighting brightens the sky only to be followed by the predictable strike of thunder.

We count the seconds between the light and sound to guess how far the storm is from us. One thousand one, one thousand two...

I like bug bites. They're the result of spending time outside playing too much croquet or badminton or golf or bocce or wiffle ball. We have so much fun and are so intent on swatting balls (or shuttlecocks) we forget about swatting bugs.

Until later, when we are inside; then I like anti-itch cream. I like it a lot.

I like running out of Popsicles or ice cream. It means we've been indulging in frozen concoctions to cope with the heat of summer's long days.

We may even skip a meal because we are outside playing and instead supplement with treats from the freezer. Ice cream for lunch = joy.

I like running out of toilet paper. It happens when everyone is home and... well... feeling at home. I add bonus points to this merry moment if everyone remembers to flush. I like when everyone flushes. It feels miraculous, because I believe it is.

I like weeds. In another universe they may be expensive, coveted plants (although I doubt it). Here, on earth, in my yard, I have the opportunity to ban them from the garden – even though they are unruly and refuse to obey humans. Weeds are good because they provide me with a worthwhile task: pulling them.

I like sand on the kitchen floor. The bathroom floor. The carpet. The dog's hair. The kids' hair. My bathing suit. You name it. Sand can be everywhere during the summer months.

I think it may even self-multiply. But it indicates one thing: the beach. And the beach – in a word – is good. Well, that and

Jill Pertler
SLICES OF LIFE

wet. And sandy.

I like standing in line to ride the roller coaster. It means I am at an amusement park and that is amusing. Queuing up (a fancy term I learned during a Disney visit) allows me to anticipate the fun.

It prolongs the entertainment and gives me more bang for my buck. Standing in line is at the heart of the free amusement park experience. Sometimes I just stand in line, without buying a ticket to ride. But not often.

I like sweating in the summer sun. It means I am burning calories, even if I am just sitting in a lawn chair with a good book.

Burning calories is always a positive thing for someone my age because once you reach the middle years, your middle tends to expand and your metabolism tends to deflate. I once gained three pounds after a brief glance toward a piece of chocolate cake, so a little sweat is welcome.

I like a wet swimsuit butt that will not dry – even though it is 90 degrees outside – because the humidity is also at 90, so your backside remains damp on the lawn chair, while you read that good book. You could go in and change, but you don't. Wet swimsuit butt is a rite of summer and shouldn't be squandered.

I like a farmer's tan. It says I've been outside doing something that is something – beyond sitting in a lawn chair with a good book.

It also indicates I've been sweating because doing something in the summer invariably involves sweat. A farmer's tan is almost like killing two birds with one stone. (Not that we encourage bird murder in my neighborhood. I like birds.)

I like cleaning the kitchen 17 times a day because the kids are home from school and they are (and I'm not exaggerating) perpetually hungry.

Despite finding the frying pan in the sink (again) and an ongoing inability to keep the fridge stocked, I like having them home during the summer. When the house is full, so is my heart. (Cheesy, I know.)

I like cheese. All year long. No explanation needed.

Summer is humidity, sticky skin, burnt shoulders, pollen, allergies, hot car seats, fruit flies on bananas, bees in your lemonade, wood ticks on your leg, ants in your kitchen, mosquitoes in the air and gnats in your nose.

It is also a time to ride with the top down, walk barefoot, grill dinner, eat fresh berries, run through the sprinkler, soak in the sun, spend time together and see the glass as half full – preferably with your favorite summertime beverage. Cheers.
