Slices of life

Defensive driving more important than Right of Way

I've never claimed to be a great driver. Good, perhaps. Careful, for sure. My family would tell you I am cautious – sometimes to the point of being jumpy at the wheel.

By jumpy I mean on the lookout for surprises, aka accidents waiting to happen. Pedestrians who come out of nowhere. Squirrels darting across the street. Dogs without leashes. And cars. Mostly other cars. I have trust issues with other cars, or more specifically the drivers of those cars.

You can't count on them to see you or follow the rules of the road. Many are looking at phones. Everyone knows you shouldn't text and drive but I see it all the time. Hence my caution and predisposition to brake first and ask question later. Defensive driving 101 – I practically invented the topic.

This seasoned roadie has learned that not all driving is created equal. Some situations are worse than others. There are a few scenarios where a diligent driver (like me) is likely to be more road-leery and brake-ready than usual.

Uncontrolled intersections are risky business. When I encounter a cross street with another vehicle inching out onto my roadway, I slow down and prepare to avoid a collision should they attempt to come crashing into me.

Four-way stop signs are controlled intersections and as such should bring comfort to a control freak. Unfortunately this isn't the case. The concept of waiting your turn was mastered by most of us in kindergarten.

All that good knowledge goes flying out the window when drivers encounter a four-way stop and leap into a me-first mentality. Some motorists even piggyback on the car in front of their own, so that both vehicles go through the intersection at the same time. Clearly illegal. So many things could go wrong at a four-way stop. So I am wary.

As I am with left turns. I go out of my way to avoid them. Left turns involve cross traffic, which could result in a T-bone that has nothing to do with a juicy steak. Besides, why make a left when three rights will get you the same outcome?

Making a left turn at a four-way stop is a double whammy. Enough said.

Not all hazards of driving occur on the roadways. Parking lots are the Wild, Wild West of the driving world. Anarchy rules and laws and logic are ignored. Drivers in parking lots pay no heed to stop signs.

They cut across traffic and fail to yield to other vehicles. People drive up the down lane, clearly ignoring the directional arrows painted on the pavement. One must be ever-alert and attentive to avoid running into shopping carts and reckless drivers.

I wish I could avoid parking lots like I avoid left turns.

My son, who often rides shotgun in my vehicle, gets annoyed with my vigilant behind-the-wheel behaviors.

"You've got the right of way," he says with the smug authority of someone with a brand new permit in his wallet and a pocketful of knowledge gleaned from a recent stint in driver's training class. Clearly his nouveau insight far surpasses my decades of dependably cautious driving experience.

"If they come crashing into us it doesn't matter who has the right of way," I tell him with the authority of a driver who long ago graduated from training permit to full-fledged license.

And then I make a few right turns toward home. It's all in the name of safety.

Publisher and socialite the indomitable Miss Maple rents a plantation house, complete with menacing alligator, to introduce her latest literary discovery. It's up to the flakey detective writers to unravel the puzzle!

In my opinion

Happiness comes from within ourselves

Although much of my work is helping people write books, I have never left the "joy" business. I still coach people and speak on science of happiness, positive psychology, and how to reduce stress. With all my clients, including book clients, I love seeing them step into their brilliance, own their bigger purpose and gain confidence in themselves. Trust and creativity grow.

As I prepare for a workshop I've been hired to give for a professional group, I am steeped in quotes I love. Let me share some of them with you.

"Don't put the key of happiness in someone else's pocket." This needs to be a reminder to us all, always. No matter how much we love our spouse and how in sync we are, our key to happiness is only up to us. As much as I adore my Prince Charming, my happiness is my business. It is not up to him to make me happy. It is my job to make me happy.

"Most people would rather be certain they're miserable, than risk being happy." ~Robert Anthony

We so often stay put in our unhappiness because we fear leaving our comfort zones. We are taught to fear the unknown, but the fear is worse than the actual unknown. Once it becomes known we wonder why we were so afraid.

We are afraid to leave a job or a relationship, even if we know it is not right for us, because we don't know what is next. Something better is next! It is always your choice. If you choose to stay in misery, no complaining allowed. That key to happiness is in your hand.

"People take different roads seeking fulfillment and happiness. Just because they're not on your road doesn't mean they've gotten lost." ~H. Jackson Brown

What floats my boat may make yours sink. You must seek your own fulfillment in your own way, even if no one else understands. Some like to travel to far-flung places. Some like to stay home and knit. No comparing, no judgement. Just the knowing that you are in charge of you and everybody else is on their own road. If our paths cross, wonderful.

"He is rich or poor according to what he is, not according to what he has." ~Henry Ward Beecher

Money cannot buy love nor happiness. Money is also not the root of all evil. You can be rich and happy or you can be rich and miserable, it has nothing to do with the money. People who aren't happy with what they have now will not be satisfied if they hit the jackpot. It's all mind-set. The more you understand that you deserve money and love, and are worthy of money and love, the more you receive and sustain money and love.

Happiness is about letting go of what we have been taught and tapping in to what we know, deep inside.

"If you observe a really happy man you will find him building a boat, writing a symphony, educating his son, growing double dahlias in his garden, or looking for dinosaur eggs in the Gobi desert. He will not be searching for happiness as if it were a collar button that has rolled under the radiator. He will not be striving for it as a goal in itself. He will have become aware that he is happy in the course of living life twenty-four crowded hours of the day." ~W. Beran Wolfe

Happiness is not out there. It is available to all in all circumstances. To figure out how to do that for yourself, give me a ring. For now, pat your pocket. The key is there.

One way we can help each other get through these challenging times is to keep our dollars local. Here are three good reasons.

Reason #1: Shopping locally saves you gas and wear and tear on your vehicle.

Reason #2: When you spend your money locally, you support the businesses whose property taxes pay for our municipal services.

Reason #3: Many of our youth programs are supported and sponsored by local businesses and if we don't support them, they can't support our kids.
