Rockford chiropractor discusses golf swing injuries

Dear Dr. Caraotta,
Everyone knows that walking is a good overall exercise, but what do you think about golf if a person walks the course. Is golf a good exercise?

Dr. Caraotta's Response

Almost every exercise is beneficial, depending on a person's health status and conditioning. There are however precautionary measures and some particulars with every sport that should be considered. In golf and other sports that heavily involve swinging an object or striking a ball, it is typical for torsional stress on the involved joints of the spine to produce chronic pain in the affected joints.

Dr. Watkins, in his book The Spine in Sports , notes that on the PGA Tour, the most common injuries are to the low back and neck. He also stated that "almost all professional golfers deal with some form of cervical (neck) or lumbar (low back) problems."

Does this mean that golf should be avoided by the general population? Absolutely not! Keep in mind that these high performance athletes are performing swinging maneuvers much more concentrated and frequent than the average golfer and this repetition is what causes this phenomenon. With this in mind, lets discuss some things that should be considered when golfing.

The golf swing demands coordinated function of the trunk, especially during the extremes of motion. The most common problem in golf is that it is easy to maintain tight trunk control in the mid-rotational power position but it is at the extremes of the back swing that most injuries occur.

This leads to a common recommendation for the recreational golfer, which is to reduce the length of the back swing and follow-through. In fact, recent research by Neighbors (1997) indicates that the back swing can be shortened approximately 20% without a loss in club head velocity at ball impact.

Strengthening certain muscle groups could also help prevent golf injuries. These muscles include the thighs, hips, abdominal, paraspinal musculature, latissimus dorsi, and the scapular stabilizers.

Players who have played for a long time will basically swing the same way they have always swung. If poor mechanics have been developed over a period of time due to injury or compensation for weaknesses or instability, they will likely have difficulty correcting the swing faults as long as they continue without intervention.

These players may require instruction on appropriate mechanics and may need to rest from the game as they rehabilitate. Next week we will discuss some injuries that are common to golfers, and some protocols of rehabilitation that could be helpful.

If you have a question that you would like Dr. Caraotta to address in his column, you can send your question to his office at 4921 E. State St., Rockford, IL. 61108 or call your question in at Caraotta Chiropractic Orthopedics, Call 815-398-4004 and ask to speak with one of the doctors.

Sunset Golf: Established in 1937 by local leaders

Sunset Golf Course, home of the famous Lyle Towns Old Home Week 4th of July Scramble, was founded in 1937 by the Kable brothers and other prominent figures in the Mount Morris township. In 1990 the course layout changed with the addition of four holes, which now play as # 4, 5, 6, and 8.

The course’s most well know attraction is the 7th hole which is a 100 yard par 3 that requires golfers to hit their shot over a giant ravine known by locals as the Pit. On the original course layout this played as the final hole, but today it is the 7th. What seems like such a simple hole has played mind games with golfers for years. Even the best golfers have managed to ruin their rounds after challenging this hole.

Today the course is an 18 hole, par 70, 6158 yard course from the white tees. Our unique layout, mature trees and rolling terrain make it a challenging and enjoyable course for any golfer.

Our course offers four different tee box settings on each hole, numerous bunkers, doglegs, and tight tree lined fairways. Five water hazards, four of which were added in 2010-2011 provide for a challenging round of golf.

We also offer a practice green for golfers who would like to work on chipping and putting before their round of golf. Five hitting cages are also at the clubhouse to get warmed up before your round.

The golf course was named for Butch Krueger and Everett Haskell. Butch Krueger was the PGA Professional at Beloit Municipal Golf Course from 1936-1966. He brought national recognition to Beloit as a touring golf professional.

Butch taught golf to thousands of Beloit golfers over several generations. Everett Haskell had many notable accomplishments and contributions to the City of Beloit and Krueger-Haskell Golf Course. Everett was a native Beloit, local businessman, city councilor, an avid golfer and supporter of the golf course.

The clubhouse offers a small merchandise area providing golfers with their basic golfing essentials; golf balls, logo shirts, golf gloves, and tees.

Food and a bar are located inside the Krueger-Haskell clubhouse which provides a friendly and relaxing atmosphere for golfers after their round of golf. They provide a variety of different food and beverage options, as well as large group catering and beverage service on the course.

Hospitality, great customer service and affordability make Krueger-Haskell Golf Course the ideal place to play golf.

Finding your courage: Dare to dream

Cour•age n. 1. The mental strength to venture, persevere and withstand danger, fear or difficulty 2. The quality of being brave; valor

I'm going to be bold and declare we've all got a fair amount of courage within us. But, like the lion in the Wizard of Oz, we may not recognize our own fearless nature because often in the midst of being courageous we feel anything but brave.

That's because courage doesn't materialize in the form of a medal we can wear around our necks. That would be too easy. And it isn't always as obvious as rescuing a kitten from a burning building – although that does qualify. It can take any number of shapes and is often a necessary component of the every day. Most of us live a life of courage without even realizing it.

According to my online thesaurus, synonyms for courage include determination, endurance, fearlessness, fortitude, boldness, tenacity and guts. We've all got guts – I'm speaking in the figurative sense.

Courage in the everyday is the new mom who drops her infant son off for the first time at daycare and then cries all the way to work and tries to dab her eyes dry so no one will know how much mental fortitude that first drop off required.

Courage is the elderly gentleman who understands that after 16 years of love and companionship his loyal golden retriever is suffering from numerous ailments and it is time to say goodbye.

Courage not only takes guts, it involves listening to them. When you see a bully and speak out even though you may be hesitant to get involved in someone else's business you are acting with a fearlessness that is inspired. When you step in to give praise to a young dad who is patiently struggling with an inconsolable baby at the grocery store you are similarly bold and courage-filled.

Courage is often invisible. Sometimes it is getting out of bed in the morning and putting one foot in front of the other to make it through the day. Resolute courage is doing the same thing the next day, and the day after that.

The mom who chooses her family over career to take a leap of faith and pursue a job that's closer to home and closer to her heart. Courageous.

The dad who coaches the youth sports team season after season, mostly because he loves the kids, partly because no other parent will volunteer. Courageous.

Trying something new, even though it will be hard and you might fail. Asking for help.

Courageous.

Being the first to say, "I'm sorry." Courageous.

Being the first to say, "I love you." Asking someone for a first – or second – date. Reaching out to hold someone's hand. Reaching out to further build a relationship. Courageous.

Courage is admitting you messed up, made a mistake or misjudged a person or situation. It is a willingness to listen to opinions that don't line up with your own preconceived notions – political or otherwise.

It takes courage to throw away your imaginary mask and let others see the real you. Simple, but probably one of the toughest scenarios yet because we all have things we think we should hide.

Daring to dream, hope and pursue – perhaps the best kinds of courage of all.

Congratulations to you, today, on your courage. It was there. It is there. And it will be there tomorrow. For you, for me, for all of us. And for that kind of tenacious bravery we all deserve a medal.
