Former Le-Win star heading to East Dubuque

Joe Edler takes over Warriors' football team

By Trenten Scheidegger
SPORTS WRITER

Former Lena-Winslow standout Joe Edler has taken his first varsity head coaching job with the East Dubuque Warriors.

Edler quarterbacked the Panthers' 2010 state championship team under Ric Arand.

Arand has led the Panthers to 21 straight playoff appearances and four state championships, so he certainly knows a thing or two about winning.

Edler said he learned a bit about that in the NUIC from Arand and his staff.

"In high school we were pretty successful and made it to the semifinals my junior year and then went on to win the state title my senior year," Edler said. "It was an amazing experience and something that I will never forget. I've learned a lot from Ric and the entire coaching staff at Le-Win, and one of the biggest takeaways from playing at Le-Win and coaching in the conference is you have to run the ball to be successful."

Arand and the Panthers are a well-known, run-dominant team. Edler hopes to develop his own successful running system.

"If a team can run the ball successfully in the NUIC they have a great chance at making the playoffs and going far in the playoffs."

After his playing days, Edler spent three seasons with the Orangeville Broncos as a member of Jay Doyle's staff, gaining experience from another side of the NUIC.

"Jay and the entire staff taught me a lot about the game of football and how to build a program," Edler said. "I was part of a rebuilding period there, and Jay was able to turn that program around. As a staff we worked together and made the weight room a priority. The kids bought in, and it shows on the field. They are a tough, physical team, and they will continue to be with Steve Snider as the new head coach."

Edler took the past season off to watch his brother lead the Le-Win to another state title and shared what it was like to have multiple rings in the family.

"It was a feeling I can't really describe, but it was definitely fun to say the least," Edler said. "The memories always are there, especially after watching my brother (Sean Ormiston) win another one this year with Le-Win. I guess he has the bragging rights because he has two rings, but I'm OK with that."

Edler watched Ormiston cap off his Panthers career with an incredible six-touchdown game in the 2019 state final.

Now, as the latter takes his playing career to the Iowa Hawkeyes, Edler is taking his next career step in taking the reigns of the Warriors.

Edler said it was interesting to make his big announcement considering everything going on in the world today.

"The announcement went well, but it was definitely different doing it on Zoom that's for sure," he said. "The entire nation is going through this unique time, and it is definitely a challenge taking over a program during a pandemic."

"With that being said, I love the challenge it brings, and the players are taking this issue head on," Edler added. "They are excited and want to get started, so now it's just a waiting game. We have been doing a lot of Zoom meetings with the players and using technology to our advantage."

Gov. touts spending federal funds on child care grants

Financial uncertainty still swirls as COVID-19 impacts tax revenues

By Jerry Nowicki
CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS

Gov. JB Pritzker signed a state budget for fiscal year 2021 on June 10, but there is no more financial clarity now than there was when lawmakers passed the measure last month.

The $42.9 billion operating budget relies upon borrowing up to $5 billion from the federal government, which would be necessary if Congress does not pass any laws providing extra funding for states amid revenue shortfalls stemming from the novel coronavirus pandemic.

The budget includes repayment of $1.6 billion in borrowing to cover shortfalls in the current fiscal year budget due to the pandemic.

According to the May report of the Commission on Government Forecasting and Accountability, or CoGFA, the revenue estimates for the upcoming fiscal year beginning July 1 are $37.6 billion if a graduated income tax constitutional amendment passes. That figure drops to $36.4 billion if voters do not approve the change to Illinois' tax structure.

If voters approve the graduated income tax amendment in November, the rates — which would shift to charge those earning more than $250,000 annually a higher income tax rate — are estimated to generate about $1.2 billion, according to CoGFA. If the public health crisis had not hit, that number would be $286 million higher.

Sales tax estimates were revised downward from March to May by nearly $1.5 billion, to $7.5 billion total for fiscal year 2021.

In a press release, the governor's office emphasized that the spending plan "maintains funding for critical programs, such as education, health care and human services."

Funding will remain level from the current year for K-12 education, community colleges and public universities.

"The COVID-19 pandemic highlighted the enormous role that government plays in keeping communities safe and providing the tools people need to build better lives," Pritzker said in a statement. "While the pandemic has had a devastating impact on our state revenues, investing in our people will allow the state to rebound and recover from this pandemic as we safely reopen. I will continue to advocate for a national program to support state and local governments to make up the difference in the revenues that fund vital services like hospitals and salaries for teachers and first responders."

According to the governor's office, more than $5 billion in federal aid — including funding from the Coronavirus Aid, Relief and Economic Security, or CARES, Act — will be directed to public health, social services, small businesses, local governments and households, including funding earmarked for communities disproportionately impacted by COVID-19.

That includes $270 million in CARES Act funding to supporting child care providers, the governor said at an event in Moline on June 10.

"And here's the best part," Pritzker said at the event. "Because there's no blueprint for this kind of program, we're asking providers to tell us how to design the approach that best helps them reopen safely with smaller group sizes, without imposing large tuition increases on families."

Illinois' Coronavirus Urgent Remediation Emergency fund, or CURE, distributes CARES Act dollars, including business interruption grants specifically designed to support businesses that endure lost revenue due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity, in partnership with the Illinois Department of Human Services, is charged with developing the grant program for licensed child care providers.

The Child Care Restoration Grants will be administered by the Illinois Network of Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies, or INCCRRA.

An Intent to Apply survey also launched June 10 to gather information for the development of the grants program, and money is to be released in July. Providers are asked to respond to the survey by 5 p.m. June 19. More information is available at inccra.org.

Other CARES Act disbursements from the CURE Fund and Local CURE Fund for local governments include: $636 million for small business/child care centers assistance; $458 million for household and community support programs; $830 million for health care providers for pandemic-related stability payments; $250 million to local governments for reimbursements of COVID-19 related costs; and $1.5 billion for state agency COVID-19 related expenses.

The governor's office also said the budget includes "reductions of operations appropriations of $200 million and another $140 million in transportation funds at the Department of Transportation from the governor's introduced levels."

Some of those savings are the result of "a continued partial hiring freeze and restricted operations expenditures," according to the office.

Highland helps students through CARES Act

Highland Community College received $455,905 in Coronavirus Aid, Relief and Economic Security Act funding to support students during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Qualified spring 2020 semester students are grant eligible for financial assistance through the CARES Act.

"Highland made an initial disbursement of federal funds to over 725 eligible, FAFSA completed students for additional costs due to the coronavirus, such as food, housing, course materials, technology, health care and/or child care," Vice President of Administrative Services Jill Janssen said in a news release. "Future disbursements of federal funds will be made to students who meet eligibility requirements and complete a 2020 FAFSA by June 30."

"In addition, an application process is in place for remaining federal funds and for other local grants, which have varying eligibility requirements," Janssen added.

The purpose of this act is to provide economic relief to millions of Americans through direct assistance to individuals, families and businesses.

Part of the CARES Act includes the Higher Education Emergency Relief Fund, which provides funding to institutions to provide emergency financial aid grants to students whose lives have been disrupted, many of whom are facing financial challenges and struggling to make ends meet.

Students do not need to apply for these funds. However, students will need to have completed the FAFSA to determine eligibility. To be eligible for these funds a student must:

- Be a degree or certificate-seeking student enrolled in the spring 2020 semester.

- Meet Title IV eligibility requirements such as being a U.S. citizen, having registered for selective service if a male and not being in default on a student loan.

- Have a complete 2019-2020 FAFSA on file with HCC.

- Be in good standing academically.

By the end of May, eligible students began receiving checks in the amount of $600 for full-time status; part-time students received $300. Students have until June 30 to either return the check to Highland or cash it.

Emergency funds through Highland's HOPE program also are available through an application process. The application is at highland.edu/hope.

Students who have any questions about funds available through the CARES Act can call Ashley Wolber at 815-599-3519 or email to FinancialAid@highland.edu.

Farm Aid touts Farmer Resilience Initiative

It launches program in response to COVID-19 to offer emergency funds

In May, Farm Aid committed $400,000 to launch a national COVID-19 Farmer Resilience Initiative, working with more than 100 local, state and regional organizations across the country to pair immediate relief efforts with longer-term resilience strategies.

Farm Aid is investing in taking care of the farmers and ranchers who are providing essential services by feeding their communities.

Farm Aid, in partnership with Great Lakes area organizations, is awarding $500 emergency relief grants to help farmers meet household expenses.

Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio families who rely on farming for their income and are experiencing hardship as a result of the pandemic are encouraged to complete an application.

Get the application form at www.surveymonkey.com/r/FarmAidCOVIDGreatLakes.

Through partners, Farm Aid will distribute at least $100,000 in each of four U.S. regions, using a multifaceted approach built upon its three decades of disaster response:

- Leveraging immediate relief to build resilience

Farmers experience significant lag time between the moment a crisis strikes and when federal and state resources actually begin to flow to community levels.

Farm Aid works with local partners to quickly distribute emergency funds in the amount of $500 to farm families in order to provide immediate relief and foster resilience before larger sources of money become available.

- Grassroots at its core

It believes that who distributes relief money matters, which is why Farm Aid funds are administered by local organizations and service providers that are positioned to build relationships with them over the course of their recovery and beyond.

This approach has the benefit of sharing power between the grantor (Farm Aid) and grantee, while handing major decision-making authority over to the local and regional organizations that work most directly with farmers.

- Convening leaders to build capacity, increase knowledge and spark model sharing

Throughout the duration of the crisis, Farm Aid is hosting weekly calls with the partners coordinating fund distribution locally, as well as with national partners who are experts in immediate and long-term disaster recovery.

The calls allow officials to share status updates on the crisis, learn from each other share response models and identify areas for further collaboration.

- Connecting the dots between crisis intervention and lasting structural change

Time and again, we find that what we learn when trying to save one farm informs the policies and interventions that help all farms. Those lessons also help build a more resilient food and agricultural system.

Farm Aid coordinates farm service providers and policy advocacy networks so that on-the-ground lessons can be translated into important policies.

FROM LENA'S KITCHEN

The not so skinny cook

We have been having beautiful weather, and I think we deserve it! The grass is green and the flowers are doing well. I love seeing how pretty everything is. This week we will continue to honor summer with some good recipes.

The first one is for a yummy shrimp salad. The dressing is a creamy dill one, and I really like dill when it is used in a seafood salad. As most of you know I am a big fan of butter, bib or Boston lettuce (it goes by so many names).

I think the salad would be pretty if it was presented in the leaves of bib lettuce. This salad would be great to serve during a warm spell.

Creamy Shrimp Salad

- ¼ C. sour cream
- ¼ C. mayonnaise
- 2 green onions, sliced
- 2 T. chopped fresh dill
- 1 T. fresh limejuice
- ¾ lb. cooked, cleaned medium shrimp, chopped
- 2 stalks celery, chopped
- 1 yellow pepper, chopped
- 5 C. chopped red leaf lettuce

Mix sour cream, mayo, onions, dill and limejuice together in a small bowl until well blended. Combine shrimp, celery and peppers in a large salad bowl. Add sour cream mixture and mix lightly. Place lettuce on four plates and top with shrimp mixture

Russian Potato Salad

A friend said that she had tried this potato salad that was in a Taste of Home magazine. I have never seen or heard of this potato salad. However, I think you have to like red beets to enjoy this one. If you can't find the pickled beets, you can make your own by using a pickling brine and then adding the brine over the beets. Let them sit in the brine for several hours and then you can use them. If you are adventurous and are ready for a different potato salad, this unique take on the traditional is a good one to try.

5 lbs. potatoes, peeled and cubed (about 8 cups)

1/3 C. sugar

1/3 C. cider vinegar

¼ C. canola oil

1 can (14½ oz.) sliced carrots, drained

1 medium onion, chopped

2 jars (15 oz. each) pickled whole beets, drained and chopped

1 C. chopped celery

½ C. chopped sweet pickles

½ C. chopped dill pickles

1 C. mayonnaise

1 t. salt

½ t. pepper

Place potatoes in a Dutch oven and cover with water. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer until tender, 10 to 15 minutes. Drain and transfer to a large bowl.

Combine sugar and vinegar in a small saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until the sugar is dissolved; pour over the hot potatoes. Cool to room temperature.

In a large skillet, heat canola oil over medium-high heat. Add carrots and the onion; cook and stir until crisp-tender, 6 to 8 minutes. Add to potatoes. Stir in beets, celery and pickles. Combine mayo, salt and pepper and gently stir into potato mixture. Refrigerate covered until chilled.

World's Greatest Tuna Sandwich

I found this recipe during Lent but put it away so I could find it. Well, I just found it last week. If you don't have a baguette, use a brat roll or even a hot dog bun that has some substance. It doesn't use any mayo, so some of you who aren't mayo lovers will be happy. I am not sure it is the world's greatest tuna sandwich or not. You can let me know what you think.

1 vine-ripened tomato, cored and sliced thin

1 small onion, sliced thin

3 T. red wine vinegar

1 garlic clove, minced

¼ t. salt

1 large baguette, halved horizontally

¼ C. chopped black olives

½ C. fresh parsley leaves

4 T. green olives, chopped

2 T. chopped fresh thyme

2 t. Worcestershire sauce

½ C. extra virgin olive oil, divided

2 T. Dijon mustard

1/3 t. pepper

2 cans oil packed tuna, drained

3 hard cooked eggs, sliced thin

Adjust the oven rack to the middle position and heat oven to 350. Lay tomato slices on paper towel lined plate and set aside. Place onion, vinegar, garlic and salt in bowl and toss to combine. Using your hands or metal spoon, remove inner crumbs from baguette bottom to create trough, leaving a ¼ inch border on sides and bottom.

Place baguette halves cut side up on baking sheet and bake until lightly toasted, 5 minutes.

Pulse black olives, parsley, green olives, thyme and Worcestershire sauce in a food processor until coarsely but evenly chopped, 10 to 12 pulses. Transfer olive mixture to bowl with onion mixture. Add ¼ cup oil, mustard and pepper and toss to combine.

Brush inside of each baguette half with 1 T. oil. Place two-thirds of olive mixture in hollow of baguette bottom. Distribute tuna evenly over olive mixture and drizzle with remaining 1 T. of oil. Shingle tomato slices over tuna. Shingle egg slices over tomato. Top eggs with remaining olive mixture and cap with baguette top.

Press gently on sandwich and slice in half crosswise on bias. Wrap each half tightly in plastic wrap.

Place rimmed baking sheet on top of sandwiches and weight with heavy Dutch oven or two 5 lb. bags of flour or sugar for 1 hour, flipping sandwiches halfway through weighting. Wrapped sandwiches can be refrigerated for up to 24 hours. Let come to room temp before serving. Unwrap sandwiches, slice each sandwich in half on bias and serve.

Chicago-style, Pull-a-part Pigs in a Blanket

If you want a picnic-style lunch or dinner, these hot dots are made a special way that everyone will love. You can make them Chicago-style by your toppings. If you want to forgo the Chicago-style, you may put your own toppings. (I know people have strong feelings about calling Chicago-style hot dogs by that name, if they aren't really "right." Case in point: using ketchup or chili just to name a few of the "sins".)

1 can (11 oz.) refrigerated soft breadsticks

1 T. poppy seed

4 Jumbo all-beef hot dogs

1/3 C. chopped tomatoes

½ C. chopped dill pickles

6 peppers, cut lengthwise in half (optional)

3 T. yellow mustard

Chopped green onions

Preheat oven to 375. Unroll breadsticks (do not separate them). Sprinkle dough with poppy seeds; press gently into dough to secure. Pull breadsticks apart, turn, poppy seed down, on cutting board. Cover baking sheet with parchment. Cut each hot dog into three pieces. Place one hot dog piece at one end of each breadstick; roll up. Place ¼ inch apart in rows of three across and four down on prepared baking sheet. Bake 14 to 16 minutes or until golden brown. Top with remaining ingredients before pulling apart to serve.

Orange Blossom Cookies

These refreshing summer cookies have a distinctive taste with the orange extract. If you aren't an orange person, you could substitute lemon or another extract in for the orange. These cookies are great for people with an egg allergy because they contain no eggs. They make a nice sized cookie.

2 C. flour

½ C. finely chopped pecans

1 t. cinnamon

¾ C. butter, softened

4 oz. (1/2 of 8 oz. pkg.) cream cheese, softened

½ C. packed brown sugar

1 t. orange extract

1 t. vanilla

½ C. sugar

Combine flour, nuts and cinnamon in a bowl. Beat butter, cream cheese and brown sugar in large bowl with mixer until light and fluffy. Gradually add flour mixture to butter mixture, mixing well after each addition. Add orange extract and vanilla and mix well.

Refrigerate dough one hour. Preheat oven to 350. Roll dough into 36 balls, using about 1 T. of dough for each ball. Roll balls, one at a time, in granulated sugar. Place 2 inches apart on parchment-covered baking sheets.

Use bottom of small drinking glass to press balls into ¼ inch thickness. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until edges of cookies are lightly browned. Cool 1 minute. Remove cookies to wire racks. Cool completely.

Lemon Icebox Cake

This icebox cake does not use ice cream. Its main ingredient is softened whipped topping (that you freeze again). Unlike a lot of icebox cakes, this one is made in a 9-by-13-inch pan. Enjoy the cool lemon taste.

2 pkg. (8 oz. each) cream cheese, softened

1 T. packed lemon zest (about 2 large lemons)

1¼ C. powdered sugar

½ C. fresh lemon juice (about 3 large lemons)

1 t. vanilla

7 C. frozen whipped topping thawed and divided

1 box (14.1 oz.) graham crackers, plus more for garnish

Lemon slices

In a large bowl, beat cream cheese and lemon zest with a mixer at medium-low speed until smooth. Gradually add powdered sugar, beating at low speed until smooth and stopping to scrape sides of bowl. Gradually add lemon juice and vanilla, beating at low speed until combined; fold in 3 cups whipped topping.

Lightly spray bottom of a 9-by-13-inch baking dish with cooking spray. In bottom of pan place a layer of graham crackers, breaking crackers as needed to cover bottom. Spread half of cream cheese mixture onto graham crackers in pan. Repeat layers once. Top with another layer of graham crackers, breaking to fit.

Loosely cover and freeze until firm, at least 4 hours or up to overnight. Let stand at room temperature for 20 to 30 minutes; just before serving, spread remaining whipped topping onto graham crackers. Garnish with lemon; cut using a serrated knife.

Closing thoughts

There are a few more things opening up around the area. I don't know if or when we will ever be back to the old "normal," but I guess we will continue to do the best we can.

My eye is healing, so it doesn't look like I will have to wear the pirate's patch; I am grateful for that. I told one of my friends that between wearing the patch and the mask, I would look like I was going to be doing something illegal. It gave us both a good laugh.

Several of my friends have reported that their produce from the garden has started to come in. Many have had to put up some kind of fences to keep the critters (big and little) out of their garden areas.

If you want a great treat on Sunday night, stop by Ruby's Ice Cream wagon. She has really great ice cream. Then you can take a tour around town and look at all of the beautiful flowers. I hope you all have a good week.

Out of this world: Dental care for astronauts

By Dr. Stephen Petras
CONTRIBUTOR

The recent SpaceX Falcon 9 launch was the first manned space flight to launch from the United States since 2011. NASA astronauts Bob Behnken and Doug Hurley safely arrived at the International Space Station for a mission that may last up to four months.

To be considered for a mission to the ISS, astronauts must pass a preflight dental exam within 10 days prior to that mission.

The exam must show them to be in excellent oral health and not expected to require dental treatment within the next year. This is necessary because of the unique challenges to their oral health that space travel imposes, as well as the absence of a dentist and limited equipment to deal with a dental emergency in space.

G-force is the amount of force that Earth gravity exerts when you are on the ground. During a routine lift-off, astronauts must endure G-forces up to four times their body weight. These forces of acceleration and vibration can shake loose compromised dental fillings.

In addition, the changes in pressure that astronauts experience would be quite painful for someone with tooth decay or compromised dental restorations. This is because gases contract or expand to match changes in atmospheric pressure around them, including any air that might be present in cavities or compromised dental fillings, crowns or other restorations.

The pain from this condition, called barodontalgia, has often been referred to as "tooth squeeze."

Astronauts must not only have excellent oral health to begin with, but it is critical that they maintain it throughout the flight.

Although there are crew medical officers on board the ISS, they do not have the training of a licensed dentist. In the absence of a dental chair, an astronaut can rotate his body upside down so the medical officer can perform an oral exam, but any procedure would require restraints to counteract the effects of microgravity.

In an extreme emergency, the medical officer could extract a tooth. However, if the medical officer should determine that a dental emergency may be life threatening and warrants returning to Earth before the mission is done, this could incur a tremendous cost in dollars and lost research.

Therefore, brushing their teeth is a critical part of an astronaut's daily routine. Because the water is recycled, most astronauts brush and then swallow their toothpaste.

As NASA prepares for even longer space missions, such as a manned flight to Mars, the probability of dental accidents and emergencies rises considerably.

Moving objects in microgravity can cause injuries, and the unprecedented duration and nutrition issues faced on such a prolonged mission increases the probability of dental decay, periodontal disease and root abscesses. Untreated dental emergencies can become life-threatening medical emergencies.

Unlike the ISS, it will not be possible to evacuate an astronaut back to Earth and extended communication delays with prohibit consultations with a specialist on Earth. Because astronauts on these long-term missions will have to treat all medical and dental emergencies by themselves, Space Dentistry has become an emerging field at NASA.

Researchers must develop the technologies, procedures and protocol to sustain and restore oral health during long-term missions. To prevent loss of limited manpower, ensure mission success, maintain astronauts' health and ensure their safe return, each crew member will need to be cross trained to utilize these emerging technological advances and follow the new protocols necessary for remote missions.

NASA technology has had a positive impact on dentistry. Advanced digital dental imaging decreases x-ray exposure and increases diagnostic detail. Dual wavelength dental lasers allow the dentist to perform procedures on hard and soft intraoral tissues.

Memory metals, clear dental braces, advances in dental filling materials and water disinfection cartridges are just a few of the many advances/inventions that have revolutionized modern dentistry. Advances in space dentistry research will yield even more.

Root canals

If you are experiencing tooth pain, whether sharp and throbbing or dull and achy, it can be difficult to bite and chew, concentrate, get through the day or get to sleep at night.

The source of tooth pain may be dental decay, a cracked tooth or an infection. Whatever the cause of your ongoing pain, it's time to see a dentist for treatment.

Inside your tooth, beneath the enamel and a hard layer called dentin, is soft tissue called pulp. The pulp contains blood vessels, nerves and connective tissues. When the pulp of the tooth becomes inflamed and is left untreated, it can become infected, or abscessed, and dies. Trauma from a sports injury, car accidents and other impact injuries also can crack or fracture teeth and damage or destroy the pulp. Your dentist typically will treat your abscess with a root canal procedure.

Some of the symptoms that indicate you may have an abscess and require root canal treatment include severe pain while chewing or biting, pimples on the gums, a chipped or cracked tooth, lingering sensitivity to hot or cold, swollen or tender gums, severe decay or a discolored tooth.

Root canal treatment is designed to eliminate bacteria from the infected pulp, prevent re-infection of the tooth and save the natural tooth. When one undergoes a root canal, the inflamed or infected pulp is removed and the inside of the tooth is carefully cleaned and disinfected, then filled and sealed.

Saving the natural tooth with root canal treatment has many advantages, including restoring normal biting force and sensation and protecting other teeth from excessive wear, strain or drifting. Once your root canal is completed, your dentist will put a crown or other restoration on the tooth to protect and restore it to full function.

Stephen Petras is an Illinois licensed general dentist at the Stockton Dental Center.

Father's Day Is Not Meant Just for Fathers

Father's Day is not meant just for fathers.
An uncle, too, can claim

The child has a need for

However they may be

Each grows into

The free testing will be held from 5 to 7:30 p.m. today (June 17) and Wednesday, June 24, at FHN Family Healthcare Center (Burchard Hills), located at 1010 W. Fairway Drive in Freeport.

No appointments or health care referrals are required for this first-come, first-served nasal pharyngeal testing.

Participants must bring valid ID and remain in their car for the testing.

Although tests will be sent for external laboratory diagnosis immediately and processed quickly, results are not returned within any specific time frame.

This is not an antibody test; it will only tell people if they have the coronavirus as of this date, not if they have had it previously.

Those who test should consult their health care providers with any questions.

Source Water Assessment

We want our valued customers to be informed about their water quality. If you would like to learn more, please feel welcome to attend any of our regularly scheduled meetings. The source water assessment for our supply has been completed by the Illinois EPA. If you would like a copy of this information, please stop by City Hall, or call our water operator at 815-369-4016. To view a summary version of the completed Source Water Assessments, including: Importance of Source Water; Susceptibility to Contamination Determination; and documentation/recommendation of Source Water Protection Efforts, you may access the Illinois EPA website at <http://www.epa.state.il.us/cgi-bin/wp/swap-fact-sheets.pl>.

Source of Water: LENA To determine Lena's susceptibility to groundwater contamination, the following documents were reviewed: a Well Site Survey, published in 1989 by the Illinois EPA, and a report entitled "Phase 2 and Phase 5 Waiver Application/Vulnerability Assessment" prepared for the Village of Lena by Fehr-Graham & Associates Engineering and Science Consultants in 1994. During the survey of Lena's source water protection area, Illinois EPA staff recorded two potential secondary sources within the minimum setback zone of well #2 and two possible problem sites within the minimum setback zone of well #3. Several other possible problem sites are located outside of the minimum setback zone, but within the survey area of both wells. Based on information provided by Lena's water supply officials, the following facilities has changed their status: Lana Farmers' Exchange has been razed and the tanks removed, Stamm Farm Systems Inc. has had the tanks removed, Lena Winslow School District 312 has been changed to Dietz Apartment Building, Stewarts Motor Service has been removed, and Green Country Express is now Werhane Enterprise. The Illinois EPA does not consider the source water susceptible to contamination. This determination is based on a number of criteria including: monitoring conducted at the wells, monitoring conducted at the entry point to the distribution system, and the available hydrogeologic data on the wells. In anticipation of the U.S. EPA's proposed Ground Water Rule, the Illinois EPA has determined that this water supply is not vulnerable to viral contamination. This determination is based upon the completed evaluation of the following criteria during the Vulnerability Waiver Process: the wells are properly constructed with sound integrity and proper site conditions; a hydrogeologic barrier exists that should prevent pathogen movement; all potential routes and sanitary defects have been mitigated such that the source water is adequately protected; monitoring data did not indicate a history of disease outbreak; and a sanitary survey of the water supply did not indicate a viral contamination threat. Because the wells are constructed in a confined aquifer, that could minimize the movement of pathogens into the wells, well hydraulics were not considered to be a significant factor in the vulnerability determination. Hence, well hydraulics were not evaluated for this groundwater supply.

Lead and Copper

Definitions:

Action Level Goal (ALG): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. ALGs allow for a margin of safety Action Level: The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.

Copper	08/09/2017	1.3	1.3	0.95	0	ppm	N	Erosion of natural deposits; Leaching from wood preservatives; Corrosion of household plumbing systems.

Water Quality Test Results

Definitions: The following tables contain scientific terms and measures, some of which may require explanation.

Avg: Regulatory compliance with some MCLs are based on running annual average of monthly samples.

Level 1 Assessment: A Level 1 assessment is a study of the water system to identify potential problems and determine (if possible) why total coliform bacteria have been found in our water system.

Level 2 Assessment: A Level 2 assessment is a very detailed study of the water system to identify potential problems and determine (if possible) why an E. coli MCL violation has occurred and/or why total coliform bacteria have been found in our water system on multiple occasions.

Maximum Contaminant Level or MCL: The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

Maximum Contaminant Level Goal or MCLG: The level of a contaminant in drinking water below limits for contaminants in bottled water which must provide the same protection for public health.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population.

Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and components associated with service lines and home plumbing. We cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you are concerned about lead in your water, you may wish to have your water tested. Information on lead in drinking water, testing methods, and steps you can take to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or at <http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead>.

In the wake of recent protests, listen to the 'unheard'

Rockford lawmaker, minister reflects on how to move forward

By Peter Hancock
CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS

In the wake of the protests and violence that have beset many communities in Illinois, state Rep. Maurice West says he thinks it's time for everyone to listen to the voices of people who rarely get to speak.

A Democrat from Rockford and a member of the Illinois Legislative Black Caucus, West talked candidly during a podcast interview as part of Capitol News Illinois' Perspectives on Progress series.

He talked about the demonstrations that took place in his community and the mood of his constituents in the wake of the death of George Floyd, the unarmed black man who was killed in Minneapolis by a white police officer May 25.

"The biggest way I interpret it is, the unfamiliar voices are just wanting to be heard," he said. "And what I mean by that is, I've had a lot of stakeholders reach out to me for an answer. And I say to them, my voice is familiar because I'm a leader in the community. We need to hear the unfamiliar voices. So that's what the cry is in the community of Rockford, to hear the unfamiliar voices, and like our mayor, listening to the groups that are putting on these protests and really understanding where they're coming from."

West, who grew up in Rockford, is serving his first term in the General Assembly. Before running for office, he worked as a career counselor for the Dislocated Workers Program and Rock Valley College. He is also an ordained minister.

In talking about people whose voices haven't been heard, West said he wasn't just talking about those who've been marginalized in society because of their race or poverty. In the conversation about race, he said, many people are afraid to speak out.

"I had a great conversation with a member of law enforcement," he said. "He's scared to say anything. He wants to say something, but he's scared to say something because he's being stereotyped as a bad police officer, because he's in law enforcement now. And I said to him, 'Black people get stereotyped all the time as being bad because we're black.' We can we can build on that similarity in terms of stereotypes."

"And so, it's all about bringing police into the conversation, understanding how they're feeling and where they're coming from, and build from there," West said. "That's not a popular thing to say because you hear all these people say, 'F the police?' Well, that's not gonna help us to get to where we need to be. Conversations have to be two-sided, which means police must be a part of the conversation as well."

Key role of media

West also said he believes the news media should play a role in promoting cross-racial understanding by amplifying the voices of those who are often reluctant to talk about race.

"I think coming from the media you guys have the best platform right now," he said. "And to utilize your platform, to talk with those who are unfamiliar, to who feel that they're voiceless and let them, let them be wrong, let them be vulnerable with how they're feeling, so that we can hear them and people around us who are may not be black and that may not understand what we're going through, can hear them and really hear the emotion and rawness to their story. It is time for us to be vulnerable on both sides."

Still, one of the biggest challenges to achieving racial equality in America, West said, is getting white people to fully appreciate how differently people of color are treated, not just by law enforcement but in virtually every aspect of life — education, housing, employment and in all types of personal interactions. But he said he had one recent experience that gives him hope it can be done.

"I saw a guy on Facebook talk about 'I've never thought I dealt with white privilege. I'm a white man. And I always argue that I don't have white privilege. But I see now that I have a GED and I have a great job that I got in 1976. And a black man in my same position will not have received that job in 1976. So I do have privilege."

"That story by itself resonated with me because he, he got it now, like he is understanding that you may not live it, but finding a way to understand it is where we need to get to right now. And the media can play huge role in that."

Righting wrongs

In the immediate aftermath of protests in Rockford, Chicago and elsewhere, West and other members of the Illinois Legislative Black Caucus held a news conference in Rockford to call for an emergency session of the General Assembly to pass social and economic reform legislation.

So far, Democratic leaders in the Illinois House and Senate have not endorsed that idea. Lawmakers are not scheduled to return to Springfield until November for the start of the fall veto session.

When asked what he would like to see from his colleagues, West said he simply wants them to listen.

"The biggest thing I would like to see from both sides of the aisle that any legislation brought to the General Assembly from the Black Caucus that's focused around police reform,

Lawsuit: Insurance mandate violates religious freedoms

Coalition files suit against abortion coverage requirement

By Rebecca Anzel
CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS

Insurance provisions of Illinois' reproductive health care law violates residents' religious freedoms, a coalition of Baptist churches and two state businesses allege in a circuit court lawsuit filed June 10.

The Reproductive Health Act, signed into law by Gov. JB Pritzker almost one year ago, overhauled Illinois' health care law. It enshrines access to pregnancy care, contraception, birth control, abortion procedures and other related benefits as a fundamental right, meaning no level of government in the state can infringe upon a person's access to those services.

In its lawsuit, the Thomas More Society, a Chicago law firm that focuses on defending religious rights, took issue with the statute's insurance mandate—that private insurance companies regulated by Illinois must cover abortions if they also cover pregnancy-related benefits.

By enforcing that provision, the state Department of Insurance has "refused to protect (Illinoisans') sincerely held religious beliefs," according to a news release.

"Radical partisans have forced employers of faith in Illinois into a terrible choice: either pay for the intentional termination of unborn children, or leave your employees' families and your own without health insurance," the law firm's vice president and senior counsel Peter Breen said in a statement.

The Illinois Baptist State Association, dental office Southland Smiles Ltd. in Cook County, and trucking company Rock River Cartage Inc., in Whiteside County, are asking a judge to rule the Reproductive Health Act "unlawful, invalid, unenforceable, null and void," according to the filing. They also want to be reimbursed for the cost of filing the case and attorney fees.

Those groups adhered with the law since Pritzker signed it and it became immediately effective on June 12, 2019. But, their attorney wrote, they did so "against their will" given the Reproductive Health Act "creates government-imposed coercive pressure on (the parties) to change or violate their religious beliefs."

On Oct. 21, 2019, the Thomas More Society filed a complaint with the U.S. Health and Human Services' Office for Civil Rights challenging the same aspect of Illinois' reproductive health care law.

At the time, the state chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union pointed out that Illinois allows those who provide health insurance and have a religious objection to abortion procedures to opt out of that insurance mandate.

That avenue exists in the Health Care Right of Conscience Act, which specifies a "health care payer" cannot be discriminated against as long as its objections of conscience are documented in any of its governing documents.

A spokesperson representing the law firm said the federal government has not responded to the Thomas More Society's complaint.

The current lawsuit is pending in Sangamon County's circuit court.

Agribusiness webinars offered July 8 to Aug. 5

A free webinar series this summer promises go-to advice on a variety of farm business management topics.

The series, sponsored by the Illinois Soybean Association as part of its new Agribusiness Management Program, will offer eight webinars from July 8 through Aug. 5. This is being done through a partnership with Illinois Farm Business Farm Management and the University of Illinois farmdoc team.

ISA District 1 Director and farmer from Genoa, Ill., Paul Rasmussen, cites agribusiness management resources as a critical operating component for any farm.

"We noticed that farmers have a real need in connecting to resources to help them with financial planning, marketing strategies, land leasing and even succession planning," Rasmussen said in a news release.

"ISA's AMP program makes those educational resources available, and we encourage farm families to participate in the webinars together."

ISA's Director of Ag Innovations, Linda Kull, hopes this series will provide farmers the necessary resources to compete and grow in today's marketplace, even when an in-person event isn't a logistical possibility this summer.

"With everything currently happening in the farm economy, how a family farm manages and plans their business now will determine how they thrive into the future," she said in the news release. "It's even more important that farmers have a strong foundation in farm business management that they can put in practice on their farm. We want AMP to be that partner that helps them maximize their farm profitability, grow their family farm wealth, and continue their operation's legacy for generations to come," she says.

that they, no questions asked, get on board," he said. "We're not trying to restrict or punish the police. That's not the approach we're coming from.

"We're trying to right some wrongs. And if you can't get on board, then why should we get on board with you? This is not about you at the moment. The black community needs support in this time. Please stand with us. Just like we stand with you on legislation that you bring forward. That's what I'm asking from my colleagues."

Lena Lions regretfully cancel fall festival

To our families, friends, volunteers, fans and the entire Lena Lions Fall Festival community. It is with deep sadness and regret that we, the Lena Lions Club board and members, have made the extremely difficult decision to cancel the fall festival that was scheduled for Sept. 11-12, 2020.

We know that the festival is a family and community staple, with each of us looking forward to it all year long. We appreciate that each of you has helped us create what has become the Cadillac of small-town festivals. Without each of you, the festival wouldn't be recognized as the best small-town festival in northwestern Illinois.

Given the current state of uncertainty surrounding large gatherings within our state/region, the current executive order and the unlikely prospects of a full reopening in time, we cannot in good conscience proceed with the festival this year.

We do not make this decision lightly. Your Lena Lions know how much this family and community event means to each of you and us. As difficult as this decision is, we know that we are making the right decision because our concerns are for the health and safety of our community, visitors, vendors, exhibitors and volunteers who have made the event what it has become for the past 70 years.

We cannot thank our community enough for all of the support over the years, and as we face this challenging and unusual summer and fall together, we ask that you continue supporting our community and our local businesses.

Please plan to join us in 2021, and we sincerely hope that you will be as ready as we will be for Fall Festival 2021!

•Edler

The Warriors finished 2-7 last year and are only 7-20 over the past three seasons.

But Edler hopes to get them back on track and is eager to do so.

"I would say getting to the playoffs and winning a state championship is every team's goal at the beginning of each season," he said. "You can say that's your goal all you want, but you have to put in the work. These kids are putting in the work and adapting to these unique circumstances. I have high expectations, but we have to take it one week at a time. Right now our focus is to continue to build that positive culture and get better every day."

Considering Edler's resume, it would be hard to doubt his ability to accomplish just that.

Use These 5 Goals When Talking to Kids About Alcohol and Other Drugs

- 1 Show you disapprove of underage drinking and other drug misuse.
- 2 Show you care about your child's health, wellness, and success.
- 3 Show you're a good source of information about alcohol and other drugs.
- 4 Show you're paying attention and you'll discourage risky behaviors.
- 5 Build your child's skills and strategies for avoiding underage drinking and drug use.

Keep it low-key. Don't worry, you don't have to get everything across in one talk. Plan to have many short talks.
