4-H Ambassadors support local communities

Highland Trustee Pennie Groezinger elected to a second term on ACCT's Diversity Committee

The Highland Community College Board of Trustees is proud to announce Trustee Pennie Groezinger has been elected to serve on the Association of Community College Trustees (ACCT) Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Committee for a second term.

Youth gain leadership skills to help their local community fight hunger

Stephenson County 4-H Ambassadors held a Food Drive in Stephenson County to help fight hunger in their own communities. This community service project was created by youth who saw an immediate need right in their own backyards. In a season where food prices are rapidly increasing, the 4-H Ambassadors were looking to help make a difference by giving and sharing with those in need. "From the time we started planning this community service project in the spring all the way to delivering the proceeds to food pantries this summer, the excitement, and willingness to help others was always at the forefront of the youths' efforts," says Brenda Heimann, Stephenson County 4-H Program Coordinator. "The Ambassadors encouraged their 4-H clubs to get involved in this service project and made it a contest, which brought about a "friendly" competition among their friends."

The 4-H Ambassadors made a flyer and passed it out to their clubs and family members, and some even put them up in businesses to help get the word out. They started collecting items April 1 and ended collecting on July 29 at the Stephenson County Fair in their 4-H building. Over 1200 items were collected in total and delivered to Freeport Area Church Cooperative, Davis Food Pantry, German Valley Food Pantry, Lena-Winslow Food Pantry, Lena Veteran's Food Pantry, and Pearl City Food Pantry.

"This service project brought a group of 14 youths together for a cause that they see affecting their own communities daily. By getting involved and trying to help ease the problem, the youth gained leadership, communication, problem-solving, and empathy skills," says Heimann.

Timber Lake Playhouse stage presents new musical comedy Church Basement Ladies

In rural Minnesota, 1965, the ladies of the local church fortify their flock with love, wisdom and, of course, the food they prepare in the church's basement kitchen. Inspired by the best-selling book "Growing Up Lutheran," Church Basement Ladies mixes together delightful original music, endearing characters, and side[dish]-splitting scenes to yield a deliciously funny musical comedy.

The comedy, centered in a rural Minnesota church, features characters seemingly every churchgoer knows: those ladies who faithfully labor in the church kitchen among the casseroles and cast iron. While serving meals for weddings, funerals and fundraisers, they also solve problems, debate recipes and offer a big dollop of laughter. As one promotion touted, "You'll laugh so hard your side dish will hurt."

Church Basement Ladies, a celebration of the church basement kitchen and the women who work there, features four distinct characters and their relationships as they organize the food and the problems of a rural Minnesota church. From the elderly matriarch of the kitchen to the young bride-to-be learning the proper order of things, the book and music give us a touching, funny look at their lives as we see them handle a record-breaking Christmas dinner, the funeral of a dear friend, a Hawaiian Easter Fundraiser, and a steaming hot July wedding. They stave off potential disasters, share and debate recipes, instruct the young, and keep the Pastor on course while thoroughly enjoying (and tolerating) each other.

Information and tickets for all Timber Lake Playhouse events are available online at www.timberlakeplayhouse.org or by calling the Box Office at 815-244-2035. The Box Office is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. and show days until intermission.

Slices of life

I guess that's a win

By JILL PERTLER
Columnist

Each of us will experience deep grief at one time or another. No one wants it, but we also don't want the alternative—for those we love to grieve after us.

Talk about a conundrum. I know this isn't a pleasant subject. But it is a real one, and one that none of us can avoid. At least not forever.

I got to the front of the queue in 2020—November to be exact—and have learned a few things since then about deep grief.

When most of us think about a queue we associate the thought with long lines and roller coasters.

Grief is most certainly a roller coaster. The most terrifying of them. The roughest ride in the park; I'll attest to that.

Here I am, more than 2½ years out and it is still terrifying, but maybe not as much. The ride has become a bit smoother, a bit more habitable. The sudden, gravity-defying descents aren't quite as deep anymore. Grief isn't what it used to be.

I guess that's a win. Thank goodness.

It used to be so intensely raw. Like walking barefoot on broken glass raw. Like swallowing acid raw. Like being bit by a thousand fire ants raw. Like staring at the sun and burning your eyes raw.

Grief doesn't end. I don't think it does. But it changes. It becomes less raw. Less minute by minute and more hour by hour. Maybe even day by day, but I haven't gotten there quite yet.

When my husband first left this world, I felt the pain in every action, every breath, every minute, every day. That has changed.

I no longer have a panic attack when seeing the men's sock aisle at the local superstore. I remember pulling my cart into an obscure space and trying to catch my breath and avoid a panic attack - because I couldn't breathe at the thought of never having to shop in the men's sock aisle ever again.

Now I can walk through the men's clothing section - socks, underwear, T-shirts, the whole lot—while continuing to breathe normally.

I guess that's a win.

I no longer die inside when I brown the hamburger. My husband always browned the hamburger. He was much better at it than I. In those first days of grief, browning the hamburger was painful. It burned deeper than I ever could have imagined.

Now I brown the hamburger and make the coffee (another of his responsibilities) without tears or turmoil.

I guess that's a win.

I took my family on vacation—to Mickey's favorite place. It was also my husband's favorite place. He was literally like a kid at a candy store, except his candy store was amusement parks. We'd have to get up too early to get to the entrance before the park opened so we could run to the best ride and get on first without much of a wait.

I couldn't imagine the place without him. But I did it. I took the kids and we ran to the best rides and posed in front of the castle, just like he would have wanted us to do.

I guess that's a win.

I sold a house. I bought a house. I sold a car. I bought a car. I learned to install flooring and paint cabinets and do a backsplash in the kitchen. All wins.

Today's win involves removing and replacing a toilet. I'm learning and stretching and doing new things. I'm not afraid of them anymore.

And I know fully and absolutely he is proud.

I guess that's a win. No, I know it is.

A new suit for the wedding

The first suit I ever bought was in my freshman year of high school back in the fall of 1976. It was a baby blue leisure. I had been voted to be the freshman rep for the homecoming court at my high school, so my mom took me to town and got me a suit. It had long lapels and my long navy-blue shirt collar hung over the lapels on each side. Those leisure suits were in style for about two years and then disappeared off the face of the earth for good. Usually, styles make a return after a decade or two, but not the leisure suit. Like very few things in this world, they have never come back around.

The only other time that I had bought a new suit was in 1997 for one of my uncle's funerals. I remember showing up with a shirt and tie and one of my older brothers took me to JC Penny and bought one for me. He even bought me a new shirt and tie to go with it. I was a very poor schoolteacher at the time with four kids and he had just begun a new higher paying job. It was very generous of him, to say the least. Anyway, that black suit has been my "Go-To" for the past twenty-seven years. During that time, I have officiated about forty weddings and another fifty or sixty funerals, all while wearing that same black suit.

Well, our last child is set to get married this Friday and my wife was wondering if I was going to rent a tux for the wedding. Since I have been thinking about purchasing a new suit for several years, I decided to take a look at what my options were. After looking at about ten different styles and colors, we decided that it was time to bite the bullet and buy a new gray one. It actually isn't all that much more than renting a tux when you compare the prices, and it will be nice to have a new one to wear for future funerals and weddings that I may officiate. The nice man in the shop advised that all I would have to do is pick out a new shirt and tie and it would make each occasion special.

Speaking of weddings, we now have all four of our kids married off. To date, the first three have blessed us with twelve grandchildren and two more on the way. Each family is so unique and provides such a blessing to my wife and I whenever we get together. It's especially fun when all of the families get together at the same time. The only difference in getting together one family at a time or when we all get together is that the grandkids

Dying and disabled Illinois prisoners kept behind bars, despite new medical release law

The Joe Coleman Medical Release Act was expected to have freed hundreds of terminally ill and medically incapacitated prisoners in Illinois by now. But only a few dozen have been released, an investigation from Injustice Watch and WBEZ reveals

By Carlos Ballesteros (Injustice Watch), Shannon Hefferman (WBEZ) and Amy Qin (WBEZ)

Editor's note: This article was produced by WBEZ, Chicago's NPR news station, and Injustice Watch, a non-profit news organization in Chicago focused on issues of equity and justice in the court system.

Phillip Merritt's dementia is so advanced he's lost the ability to speak. But with the help of his cellmates at Western Illinois Correctional Center, the 71-year-old still manages to get on the phone with his brother every few weeks.

"He has to have someone call me, and then I don't know what to say to him because he can't understand anything, so I'll just talk," said Merritt's brother, Michael Merritt, in an interview. "All he can say are two words. ... I mean, he's just gone."

Merritt's deteriorating condition makes him a prime candidate to get out of prison under the Joe Coleman Medical Release Act, a pivotal criminal justice reform bill touted by Gov. JB Pritzker and Illinois Democrats as an effective way to alleviate the state's decrepit prison health care system, reduce the "staggering" costs of caring for ailing people in prison, and reunite families with frail loved ones.

Under the act—named after a decorated Army veteran who died of prostate cancer while incarcerated—Illinois prisoners can request early release if they're terminally ill and expected to die within 18 months or if they're medically incapacitated and need help with more than one activity of daily living, such as eating or using the bathroom.

But a year-and-a-half since the Coleman Act went into effect, an investigation by Injustice Watch and WBEZ found far fewer prisoners have been released under the law than expected, as the medical release process has become mired in the charged politics of criminal justice reform in the post-George Floyd era.

Behind the lower-than-expected numbers is the Prisoner Review Board, a state body appointed by Pritzker and confirmed by the Illinois Senate with final say on medical release requests.

As of mid-August, the board had denied nearly two-thirds of medical release requests from dying and disabled prisoners who met the medical criteria to get out of prison under the Coleman Act—including Merritt. "I couldn't believe it," his brother said. "How could they deny him? He can't even talk!"

More than half of the 94 denied applicants were older than age 60, and half had spent at least 15 years behind bars, according to an analysis of state prison data. At least two died in prison, including an 81-year-old who had been incarcerated for more than three decades and was scheduled to be released in 2025. Another man died five days before the board denied his request.

Meanwhile, the Prisoner Review Board has only granted 52 medical releases—a rate of fewer than three releases per month on average since board members began voting on those requests, records show.

Advocates say the board is undermining the Coleman Act and forcing ill-equipped prison staff to care for dying and disabled prisoners, even those with families practically begging to take them off their hands. "Our prison system is now completely overburdened by people who pose absolutely no risk to public safety but are tremendously expensive to care for," said Jennifer Soble, lead author of the Coleman Act and executive director of the Illinois Prison Project, a nonprofit legal group that represents dozens of medical release applicants. "From a cost-saving perspective, from a government-efficiency perspective, and truly from a moral perspective, we need to be doing something differently here," she said.

Donald Shelton, chair of the Prisoner Review Board, declined an interview request, but he defended the board's record on medical release requests in an email sent through a spokesperson. "Each case that comes before the board comes with its own set of circumstances to be studied and evaluated by members," he wrote. "Due diligence is given by the board to every person who sets a petition before them."

More medical releases could save taxpayers millions

It's unclear exactly how many of Illinois' nearly 30,000 prisoners could qualify for medical release. Under the Coleman Act, the Illinois Department of Corrections is required to keep track of that number, but department officials said they don't have it yet. A department spokesperson said the data would be published by year's end. What is clear, from years of scathing reports from an independent monitor appointed by a federal judge, is Illinois prisons are unfit to provide health care for the thousands of aging, disabled and incapacitated prisoners.

Half of the state's prison medical staff jobs are currently vacant. Prisoners with mobility issues suffer bed sores and frequent falls because no one is around to care for them. Some are even left sitting in their own waste, according to the monitor's reports. "Prescriptions go unrefilled, cancers go undiagnosed. In the worst cases, as everyone here knows, people die painful deaths because of the lack of care," attorney Camille Bennett with the ACLU of Illinois said at a recent hearing on health care in state prisons.

Even this substandard care is expensive. Illinois paid $250 million last fiscal year to Wexford Health Sources, a for-profit company contracted to provide health care to state prisoners, according to state records. Wexford's 10-year contract expired in 2021, but the company continues providing care as Illinois seeks new bidders. Releasing more people under the Coleman Act could bring down the long-term cost of prison health care, said Alan Mills, executive director of the Uptown People's Law Center, a legal clinic in Chicago whose lawsuits against the state led to the appointment of the independent monitor. "The more prisoners there are who are medically needy, the higher the cost of caring for them, and the higher the bids will be," Mills said.

Conversely, if the Prisoner Review Board approved more medical releases, the cost savings for taxpayers in the long term could be in the millions, Mills said. Daniel Conn, chief executive of Wexford Health Sources, did not respond to an interview request. LaToya Hughes, acting director of the Illinois Department of Corrections, declined to comment.

There are other, more immediate savings for Illinois taxpayers if more ailing prisoners were released, Mills said. A recent government report showed Illinois spends more than $76,000 on average to incarcerate a single person for a year. Experts say terminally ill and incapacitated prisoners are much more expensive to care for. Prisoners whose medical needs can't be met in prison infirmaries are escorted to and from hospitals by guards. With prisons short-staffed, officers already routinely require overtime pay.

By refusing to release more ailing prisoners, the Prisoner Review Board is also making it harder for prison medical staff to care for everyone else, Mills said. "What limited resources we have are being devoted to people who are most seriously mentally or physically ill, and that doesn't leave any health care for anybody else at all," he said.

At the same time, the overburdened health care system is also blocking more prisoners from getting out under the Coleman Act. Prisoners must be found qualified for medical release by a prison doctor or nurse before the board votes on their case. But prisoners often wait weeks or months to know whether they'll qualify, records show. In one case, a prisoner at Illinois River Correctional Center waited 152 days before finding out he didn't qualify for release, records show.

Prison medical staff have said 240 prisoners who applied were unqualified for medical release. At least a handful of those prisoners lived in a prison infirmary.

'Surge' in organization efforts has labor leaders optimistic for the future

'State of the Unions' report shows increased organizing activity

By Peter Hancock
CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS

As workers in Illinois celebrated Labor Day on Monday, a new report shows there has been a surge in efforts to organize labor unions in workplaces throughout the state, while overall public approval of labor unions nationally is the highest in nearly six decades. In 2022, there were 72 successful petitions to organize labor unions in Illinois, which represent 9,600 new unionized workers, the highest single-year numbers at any point in the last decade. That's according to The State of the Unions 2023, an annual report by the Illinois Economic Policy Institute, a think tank with strong ties to organized labor, and the Center for Middle Class Revival at the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign.

After decades of declining union membership and declining unionization rates, U of I's Robert Bruno, a coauthor of the report, said those numbers may signal a resurgence in the labor movement.

"That's kind of a leading indicator of an upsurge, of growth in the movement," Bruno said in an interview. "And if you look at where you're seeing organizing happening—in a lot of growth sectors with larger numbers of employees—then you see the kinds of conditions for increasing the actual density of the labor movement."

have so much fun playing with their cousins that they kind of forget about Grandpa and Grandma, unless I get out the whiffle ball and bat. They love baseball and they all come running. The older ones especially are really starting to spank the ball good. There are always some great opportunities for a little character building as we play. It's a lot like teaching my gym classes at school. I tell my classes that I have three rules, respect, respect, and respect. Respect for others, respect for themselves and respect for the rules of whatever game we are playing. I guess once a coach, always a coach. Jesus did a lot of coaching when He was on this earth. He started out with a team of twelve disciples whom He guided and challenged each and every day. In Luke 9:22-23 we read, And he said to all, "If anyone would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me. For whoever would save his life will lose it, but whoever loses his life for my sake will save it." I'm sure Jesus went on to tell them how to do these things.

"Come after me" means to become a disciple and requires that a disciple number one, deny himself. This means not simply denying certain things but denying personal control of one's life. Number two shows true commitment. Jesus said to take up his cross and make a commitment that will lead to rejection and possibly even to the point of death. Number three, Jesus said is to "follow me." In Jesus' day, "follow me" also meant joining the company of his disciples who traveled in ministry with Jesus around Palestine. Today, we have the same choices to make if we are going to become His followers. Giving our hearts to Jesus means He owns us and that leads to eternal life.

Until next week, God bless!

responsibilities of standing up as a voice of equity and inclusion for all students and residents in the counties I serve."

She believes representing HCC at both ICCTA and ACCT puts the Northwest Illinois region on the map. She likes having a voice and is humble and confident in representing the communities in the district. "Our community college system is and will be a game changer for our region, from CDL driving courses and welding certificates to smooth transfer programs with area four-year institutions," said Groezinger. "I believe in Highland, our students and our communities, and am focused on living up to our mission of shaping futures by providing quality education and learning opportunities through programs and services that encourage personal and professional growth."

She is currently serving on the Tyler's Justice Center Board of Directors (a non-profit children's advocacy center), the Illinois Bank & Trust NW IL Commercial and Community Development Board, the Illinois Grain & Feed Legislative Committee & Scholarship Committee, and the Pearl City Elevator (PCE) Empowering Foundation. She is also a member of the Society of Human Resource Management, the National FFA Alumni Association, and the Women's Enrichment Network of the Greater Freeport Partnership, as well as previous years of service on the University of Illinois Extension Council, township government and Stockton Strong community development committee.

Groezinger is starting her 33rd year of serving the agriculture industry working for Pearl City Elevator as the Chief Customer and People Officer (CCPO). Her leadership from both a personal and professional point of view contributes to a well-rounded voice of reason for area farmers, employees, and the agriculture industry.

She is a background cheerleader for her son's flower farm business, Clara Joyce Flowers. When not working for PCE or volunteering, she can be found helping support her son Drew's growing flower production and wedding design business.

"Living out my family's legacy of faith, I am active in the same country church my great-grandfather helped build," she adds.

Lena-Winslow volleyball picks up right where they left off

By Trenten Scheidegger
CORRESPONDENT

The 2023 volleyball season is off to a bang for the Lena-Winslow Panthers. After two early season matchups, the Panthers picked up a pair of wins including a Northwest Upstate Illini Conference victory over Eastland.

On Thursday, Aug. 24 the Panthers opened their season with a road trip to Hanover to face off with the River Ridge Wildcats. Le-Win was looking to get off to a quick start, while the Wildcats were eager to test themselves against some premier competition.

The Panthers wasted no time in making a statement. In the very first set, Le-Win jumped out to an early lead and they didn't look back. Quickly, Le-Win went up 1-0 after beating River Ridge 25-15. In set two, the Wildcats appeared to be much more settled in. On their home court, River Ridge battled against the Panthers. Despite giving them their best efforts, a late run allowed Le-Win to ensure a 2-0 sweep with a 25-20 victory over the Wildcats.

The River Ridge defense simply had no answer for the attacking duo of Kaidynce Lynch and Molly Amendt. The senior duo put on a show at the net as Lynch led the way with eight kills and Amendt had seven kills of her own. They each had a block on the night as well.

Defensively, Grace Groezinger and Mia Diffenderfer led the way with two blocks each. Diffenderfer also led the team in digs with five. Both Lynch and Isabelle Paulsen finished with four digs. Alyssa Daughenbaugh facilitated the offense with sixteen assists on the night.

It was the perfect start to the season for Le-Win, but they had their eyes set on their next matchup. On Tuesday, Aug. 29 the Panthers got to play their home opener as they played host to the Eastland Cougars. Last year, Eastland finished with 18 wins and they looked to be a formidable opponent for the 2023 Panthers.

Early on, it looked like a fairly even matchup. Thanks to another late run, the Panthers managed to go up 1-0 after beating Eastland 25-19. The second set brought some early season adversity for the Panthers. It was a good chance to see how the 2023 squad would react.

It was a back-and-forth race, but Eastland would ultimately even the series 1-1 after picking up a 26-24 victory over the Panthers. It was the first set loss of the season for the Panthers, and they needed to step up in the third set to ensure a victory.

Le-Win did that, and more. In the third and final set, the Panthers dominated their way to a 25-15 victory. Lynch wasn't going to waste any more time as she stole the momentum with each and every kill. At the end of the night, Lynch racked up 20 total kills as her big swings helped give the Panthers their second victory of the year.

Amendt also had double digit kills as she finished with 11, to go along with a pair of blocks. Groezinger and Daughenbaugh each had three total blocks as the Panthers gave Eastland fits at the net. Lynch also flashed defensively, leading the team with ten digs. Daughenbaugh had the offense flowing once again as she racked up 31 assists.

After the 2-0 start, the Panthers appear to have a nice combination of an attacking offense and energetic defenders. Le-Win has more conference matchups ahead of them as they travel to face off with Pearl City on Thursday, Sept. 7. They return home on Tuesday, Sept. 12 to play host to the Pectonica Indians.

Week one goes to plan for Orangeville Broncos

By Trenten Scheidegger
CORRESPONDENT

The Orangeville Broncos have been looking to return to their winning ways on the football field. After last year's 2-8 finish, the Broncos were eager to get back out there and prove themselves on the gridiron in 2023. This year Orangeville is doing so under new head coach, Scott Jones. Ahead of the season, Jones preached his mentality of building the team's confidence. "First off, we have to make sure we can convince the team and the players that they can win. A lot of them were hanging their heads from last season. So, we have to build that up first. That's kind of the main focal point. These kids have to know they can win. We can coach all we want, but unless they want to do it, they are not going to do it," Jones explained.

Jones will have to continue building the team up before he gets them where he wants them to be. "This is not my team. This team belongs to the players, and I'm just here to help guide them. I run a fairly tight ship, I like a little self-leadership, and their hearts need a little uplifting from last year," Jones stated.

"When I was in high school, I heard about Orangeville's 'tough football.' I was about 50 miles away, so the reputation for Orangeville hard-nose football precedes itself from miles away."

- Scott Jones, Orangeville's Head Coach

At 44 years old, Jones is hoping the team can return to the physical ways of the old days stating, "When I was in high school, I heard about Orangeville's 'tough football.' I was about 50 miles away, so the reputation for Orangeville hard-nose football precedes itself from miles away. So, I just want to make sure we bring that back."

It was all just talk for Jones and the Broncos ahead of the 2023 season, but they finally got a shot to put that on display in their week one matchup last Saturday. On Aug. 26 the Broncos kicked off their season with a home opener against Ashton-Franklin Center. To start the game, the Broncos found themselves trailing as AFC put up the only points in the first quarter. A failed conversion left the Broncos trailing by six, however.

Although the Broncos didn't put up any points in the first quarter, it didn't take them long to get going in the second. Blake Folgate was the team's leading rusher last year, and he punched in the first points of 2023 with a three-yard plunge. A successful two-point conversion gave Orangeville a two-point lead, and they didn't look back.

Later, Cody Wirth broke

free on a 20-yard touchdown run, which helped the Broncos go up by 10 points. Before the end of the first half, Folgate ran in another score and Wirth caught a six-yard passing touchdown from Ben Briggs. After trailing to end the first, Orangeville took a 30-6 lead into the second half.

In the second half, the Broncos went to work on the clock. Folgate tallied another 25-yard rushing touchdown, while Miklo Webb caught a 42-yard passing touchdown from Wirth.

With the game under control, the Broncos were able to run down the clock on a 46-12 victory in week one. It was just the performance Jones and the Broncos hoped to see. Orangeville got physical with nearly 200 rushing yards. They put up another 97 yards through the air.

Folgate led the team in rushing with 135 yards and three scores on the ground. Wirth put up another 35 rushing yards to go with his 97 passing yards and two scores through the air. All in all, Wirth had three total scores in the game.

On Friday, Sept. 8 the Broncos have a classic matchup as they travel to face off with the River Ridge Wildcats.

While the rate of unionized workers in Illinois had increased in 2020—followed by a boost of nearly 16,000 new unionized workers the following year—the state saw declines in both metrics in the past year, according to the report. That continued the downward trend in unionization in the last decade. In 2022, there were 734,430 unionized workers in Illinois, which represented 13.1 percent of the state's total workforce.

The report attributes that to a shift in the state's economy away from manufacturing and other unionized sectors toward more service- and knowledge-based industries with low unionization rates. It also cites a large number of vacancies in federal, state and local government positions, which make up the bulk of union membership.

The authors also attribute some of that to the 2018 U.S. Supreme Court case, Janus v. the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which struck down an Illinois law that required public employees who chose not to join the union representing their shop to nevertheless pay a portion of their union dues known as "fair share" or "agency fees." Those fees covered a portion of the union's costs for collective bargaining. "State and local government vacancies increased 78 percent following Janus as wages in the public sector failed to keep pace with those in the private sector," said ILEPI's Frank Manzo IV, the other coauthor of the report. "And in Illinois, unfilled positions at public school districts rose 164 percent. And Illinois also had thousands of vacant state local government jobs and in 2022 ... So it's the labor shortage that's in part caused by the Janus decision because workers are dissatisfied with pay in the public sector."

Statewide, public sector union membership has fallen by about 24,000, or 3.3 percent, since the Janus decision and now averages around 334,000. Still, the report notes, Illinois' unionization rate of 13.1 percent of its workforce is significantly higher than the national average of 10.1 percent. Nationwide, however, total union membership grew in 2022 to nearly 14.3 million workers, the first time that has happened since 2017. The report cites an August 2022 Gallup poll that found 71 percent of Americans say they approve of labor unions, up from 68 percent the year before and the highest union approval rating Gallup had recorded since 1965.

The demographics of union membership have also been changing, with younger workers aged 25-34 making up a larger share of the total. Since 2019, that age group saw a 2.3 percentage point increase in unionization. By contrast, there were declines in unionization among workers aged 35-44 and older workers over 65. Unionization rates were highest among people with master's degrees but lowest among people with less than a high school diploma as well as people with professional or doctorate degrees. The top four industries by unionization rates were public administration, construction, transportation and utilities, and the combined educational and health services industry.

The report notes that the manufacturing workforce, historically a leader in industrial unionization, is now only 8.8 percent organized in Illinois.

IN*CI*DENTAL*LY

Current federal dental legislation

A few weeks ago, I wrote about the work of the Dental Corps during the various wars. Realizing the impact of poor oral and overall health on our service members military readiness, the armed services have established dental and medical deployable requirements. Unfortunately, 130,000 service and National Guard members have been identified as lacking any type of medical or dental insurance. Deployment requirements also have an impact on recruitment for people who do not have insurance, nor the means to pay for the necessary dental or medical care needed to meet the eligibility requirements. As national security rests on our ability to deploy our troops at a moment's notice, members of the House and Senate Armed Services Committee are working to pass the Dental Care for Our Troops Act in the 2024 National Defense Authorization Act.

Another federal bill that has been put forward seeks to address the lack of adequate medical and dental care in our rural communities. Passage of the Rural Health Workforce Pathway Act would see the Health Resources and Service Administration distribute grants to either establish, improve, or expand health career education, including guidance, mentoring and assistance in enrolling and succeeding in various health training programs in rural elementary and secondary schools. Studies have shown that early exposure to professional healthcare career opportunities results in a greater number of rural students choosing to pursue a health care career. Rural students are also more likely to choose to practice in a rural environment.

In a previous column I discussed how the Human Papilloma Virus (HPV) is responsible for approximately 70% of oropharyngeal cancers in the United States. In addition to head and neck cancers, HPV is linked to cervical and vulvar cancers in women, penis cancer in men and anal cancer in both men and women. As it has been shown that the earlier someone receives the HPV vaccine, the better it works to prevent these cancers, the American Dental Association is grateful that their efforts to protect the population through HPV vaccine education will find further support as federal legislation has established the PREVENT HPV CANCERS Act. This will support HPV vaccine education in all healthcare settings.

I also wanted to update you on the Illinois State Dental Society's (ISDS) efforts to address dental insurance reform. As I reported in a column earlier this year, states across the nation have been pursuing legislation that would require dental insurance companies to spend at least 80% of premium dollars collected on patient care. As I reported, Massachusetts voters overwhelmingly supported legislation that now requires

FROM LENA'S KITCHEN

The not so skinny cook

Labor Day has ended the summer unofficially. Remember the old saying of not being able to wear white after Labor Day? I know that dates me. There are probably other things we aren't supposed to be doing, but the weather is heating up once again, so fall seems as if it is very far away. This week we have some good salads, a great sandwich, and yummy desserts. Have a good week cooking.

Corn Salad

If you still have some fresh corn, this salad is one you might want to try. It has just a little zip to it with the cilantro and red pepper. The avocados give it just the right taste for an end of the summer salad.

- 8 ears fresh corn
- 1 1/2 T. olive oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 C. cooked black beans, rinsed and drained
- 1/2 C. chopped cilantro
- 1 red pepper, diced
- 1 1/2 large avocados, pitted, peeled, and diced
- 1/2 C. red onion, diced
- 1/2 C. feta or Queso fresco cheese

Dressing:

- 1 t. honey
- 1 T. lime juice
- 1/2 t. chili powder
- 1/4 t. cumin
- 1/4 t. salt
- 1/4 C. mayonnaise
- Cut corn kernels from

cobs. In a large skillet, heat oil over medium-high heat; add corn. Cook, stirring frequently, until lightly charred, 10 to 15 minutes. Add garlic and cook until fragrant, about 1 minute. In a medium bowl, combine corn mixture, beans, 1/2 C. cilantro, and 1/2 C. cheese. Toss gently until evenly combined.

Dressing: In a bowl, whisk together dressing ingredients; pour over salad. Gently toss until coated. Garnish with cheese and cilantro leaves.

Spinach Almond Salad

This salad is a different take on spinach. The ginger salad dressing can be bought in many grocery stores, or you can make your own.

- 1 pkg. (6 oz.) baby spinach
- 2 C. cooked pork
- 1 C. bean sprouts

2 medium carrots, thinly sliced

- 1/2 C. sliced mushrooms
- 1/2 C. sliced almonds, toasted

Ginger Salad Dressing

- 1/2 C. extra virgin olive oil
- 2 T. apple cider vinegar
- 2 T. Dijon mustard
- 1 T. honey
- 2 t. finely grated ginger
- 1/2 t. sea salt
- 1/4 t. pepper

In a large bowl, combine the first 6 ingredients. Dressing: In a jar or small bowl, whisk together all ingredients until fully blended. If needed, put in microwave for 40 seconds and shake again. Pour over salad.

Chicken Parmesan Slider Bake

Sliders seem to be the rage to eat now. These are made with the breaded chicken tenders, so they are easy from the beginning. These are great for Sunday football get togethers.

24 oz. frozen breaded chicken tenders

- 1 pkg. (12 oz.) Hawaiian sweet rolls

14 slices provolone cheese, divided

- 1 jar (24 oz.) marinara sauce

Topping

- 1/2 C. butter, cubed
- 1 t. garlic powder
- 1 t. crushed red pepper flakes
- 1/4 C. grated Parmesan cheese

- 2 T. minced fresh basil

Preheat oven to 375. Prepare chicken tenders according to package directions. Without separating rolls, cut horizontally in half; arrange all bottoms in a greased 9 x 13 baking dish. Place 8 cheese slices over roll bottoms, overlapping as needed. Bake until cheese is melted, 3 to 5 minutes. Layer rolls with half of the sauce, chicken tenders, remaining sauce, and remaining cheese slices.

Topping: Microwave butter, garlic powder and red pepper flakes covered, on high, stirring occasionally, until butter is melted. Pour over rolls, sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake, uncovered, until golden brown and heated through, 20 to 25 minutes. Sprinkle with basil before serving.

Eggplant Casserole

This time of the year I usually get a request for an eggplant recipe. This one has rice and cheese. You can substitute sesame seeds for pine nuts if you find pine nuts too expensive. Remember to keep nuts in the freezer until you use them. Prego makes a good tomato/basil pasta sauce.

- 1 1/2 C. cooked rice
- 1 C. shredded Italian cheese blend

- 1/3 C. chopped fresh basil

- 1 egg
- 1/4 t. pepper

- 1 1/2 lbs. eggplant, trimmed, cut into 24 round slices, 1/2 inch thick

- 1/4 t. salt

- 1 1/2 C. tomato and basil pasta sauce from 24 oz. jar

- 1/3 C. crumbled feta
- 2 T. pine nuts

Heat oven to 400. In a medium bowl, combine rice, shredded cheese, chopped basil, egg and pepper; stir until evenly combined. Cover and reserve. Heat skillet over medium heat. Coat eggplant slices with cooking spray; sprinkle both sides with salt. In batches, cook eggplant, flipping once until softened, 3 to 4 minutes per side. In a 9 x 13 baking dish sprayed with cooking spray, spread 3/4

C. pasta sauce. Place 12 eggplant slices in dish. Divide rice mixture evenly among slices. Top with remaining eggplant slices and spread with remaining sauce. Coat sheet of foil with cooking spray. Cover baking dish with foil, coated side down. Bake until hot, about 20 minutes. Uncover and top with feta cheese and pine nuts; bake 5 minutes. Top with additional basil leaves if desired.

Caramel Apple Pie Bars

These bars require a little time and effort, but they are definitely worth it. The apples are just starting to come in, so it is a perfect time to make this great dessert. You can substitute Honeycrisp or Braeburn apples for the Golden Delicious if you can't find them.

- 1/4 C. unsalted butter
- 6 C. Golden Delicious apple (about 4)

- 1/2 C. water
- 2 1/2 T. cornstarch

- 2 1/4 C. firmly packed brown sugar, divided)

- 1 t. apple pie spice
- 3 1/2 C. flour

- 1 C. old-fashioned oats
- 3/4 C. finely chopped pecans

- 1 t. baking powder
- 1 t. salt

- 1 1/2 C. unsalted butter, melted

- 2 pkg (8 oz. each) cream cheese, softened

- 1/2 C. sugar
- 1 t. vanilla

- 2 eggs, room temperature

- Caramel topping

In a large skillet, melt butter over medium heat. Add apples; cook, stirring frequently, until almost tender, 3 to 4 minutes. In a small bowl, whisk together 1/2 C. water and cornstarch. Pour over apples.

Add ½ C. brown sugar and pie spice. Bring to a boil and cook, stirring constantly, for 1 minute. Remove from heat and let cool completely.

Preheat the oven to 350. Line a 9 x 13 baking pan with foil, letting excess extend over sides of pan. Spray with baking spray with flour. In a large bowl, stir together flour, oats, pecans, baking powder, salt and remaining 1 ¾ C. brown sugar. Drizzle with melted butter; toss with a fork until moistened and crumbly. Reserve 2 C. packed flour mixture in a small bowl and refrigerate until ready to use. Press remaining flour mixture into bottom of prepared pan. Bake until edges are just lightly browned, 12 to 15 minutes. Let cool completely on a wire rack. Leave oven on.

Beat cream cheese in the bowl of a stand mixer with the paddle attachment at medium speed until smooth. Add sugar and vanilla and beat until creamy. With mixer on low speed, add eggs, one at a time, beating just until combined after each addition. Pour cream cheese mixture over cooled crust, spreading into an even layer. Pour apple mixture over cream cheese layer. Crumble reserved 2 C. flour mixture on top. Bake until top is golden brown and mixture is set around edges and jiggles slightly in center and an instant read thermometer inserted in center registers 155, about 30 minutes. Let cool completely on a wire rack. Refrigerate until thoroughly chilled, about 8 hours or up to overnight. Using excess foil as handles, remove from pan. Gently peel foil from sides. Cut into bars and drizzle with caramel.

Layered Lemon Dessert Squares

These bars are easy and taste like lemon pie. I love lemon curd, and you can usually find it in the jelly and jam section of the grocery store.

¾ C. graham cracker crumbs
 1¼ C. sugar, divided
 1 T. cinnamon
 1 ¼ C. butter, melted
 2 pkg. (8 oz. each) cream cheese softened
 2 C. heavy whipping cream
 1 t. lemon extract
 2 jars (10 oz. each) lemon curd or 1 can (15¾ oz.) lemon pie filling

In a large bowl, mix cracker crumbs, ¾ C. sugar and cinnamon; stir in butter. Reserve half of mixture for topping. Press remaining crumb mixture onto bottom of a greased 9 x 13 baking dish. In a large bowl, beat cream cheese and remaining sugar until smooth. Gradually beat in cream and extract until soft peaks form. Spread half of the cream cheese mixture over crust. Gently spread lemon curd over cream cheese layer. Spread with remaining cream cheese mixture. Sprinkle with reserved cracker crumb mixture. Refrigerate, covered, overnight. Cut into squares to serve.

Final Thoughts

One of my friends made the pineapple pie recipe and brought me a piece. It was refreshing and tasty. I always like to hear when readers have a good experience with recipes. Next week is the Fall Festival. We are hoping for good weather. We haven't had much rain, and I really don't wish for rain on our parade or on Friday or Saturday night. The town is getting spruced up; most of the trees have been trimmed or removed from the storm. I had one planted in my backyard; I figure when you lose three, you better at least replace those three with one. I know at my age I won't see it grow very tall, but it is nice and straight in the backyard. I can see it from my window as I watch television.

The gazebo on Main Street is taking shape. It looks great and will be used, I am sure. Football, volleyball, and golf continue. I am watching baseball and trying not to get too frustrated with the Cubs. Frustration is one of the endearing emotions of a Cub fan, as we have had a lot of practice with hoping.

I mentioned last week that we continue to see fruits and vegetables of the season coming in as bumper crops. Zucchini and summer squash are still producing by the bushel baskets. Fall squash and apples are beginning to appear. There are good eats out there, and we better enjoy them while we can. Send any recipes for the great fruits and vegetables of the season. If you have some recipes you would like to share, you can contact us in person, by mail at From Lena's Kitchens, The Shopper's Guide at 240 W. Prisoners (Continued from page 5) used wheelchairs, or had terminal diseases like end-stage liver disease; and at least three died in prison, records show.

There are other frail and disabled prisoners who don't see a doctor on a regular basis, "so there's no way for the doctors to know about their condition," Soble said.

Michael Merritt knows the limitations of the prison health care system all too well. His brother Phillip Merritt hasn't received proper medical treatment in prison for years, he said, and he's afraid of what could happen as his brother's dementia worsens. He wishes the state would let his brother die at home, where his family can take turns caring for him, instead of a prison cell, where he's unsure whether there's anyone to properly look after him. "I don't know what the problem is," Merritt said. "They know they can't take care of him in there the way he is supposed to be taken care of."

Medical release decisions dictated by politics

The Prisoner Review Board never told Merritt why they denied his brother's medical release request. Their deliberations happen behind closed doors, and the law doesn't require them to provide an explanation. Board chair Shelton said members weigh many factors when voting on medical release requests, but they primarily focus on an applicant's prior convictions, where they plan to live once they're released, and testimonies from the victims of their crimes.

An analysis of the board's decisions shows there's likely another factor at play: politics.

Under state law, the board is required to be roughly evenly split between Democrats and Republicans. The 12 current members include former law enforcement officials, educators, attorneys, and counselors. Pritzker appoints all board members, who are then confirmed by the state Senate.

Medical release requests are decided by panels of three board members; at least two must agree to either approve or deny a request. Shelton said board members are "chosen randomly" for the panels.

But so far, Republicans have cast more votes in medical release cases than Democrats—and they are much more likely to vote to deny those requests, an analysis of voting data shows.

Three out of the four board members with the highest denial rates—Jared Bohland, Kenneth Tupy, and LeAnn Miller—are Republicans. Each of them voted to deny release in more than 70% of the cases they heard, and each voted on more than a third of all medical release requests, voting data shows. Bohland and Tupy, along with Democrat Matthew Coates, were on the panel that denied Phillip Merritt's medical release request in July. They voted to deny six out of seven requests that day, records show.

A month earlier, Bohland was part of another panel, this time with two other Democrats, when they heard the case of 82-year-old Saul Colbert. Like Merritt, Colbert developed dementia while serving time for armed robbery. They both also had previous violent convictions, records show; Merritt had a conviction for attempted murder, while Colbert was convicted of murder. Both had family ready to take them in, and both were represented by the same attorney with the Illinois Prison Project. But the board voted 2-1 to release Colbert, with Bohland voting against.

"The only difference between those cases was the panel," Soble said.

Through a spokesperson, Bohland, Tupy, and Miller declined to answer questions about their voting records. Lisa Daniels, a former board member and a restorative justice practitioner, said she believes some of her former colleagues are ideologically against letting anyone out of prison early. They "simply believe that a person should complete the entirety of their sentence, no matter the circumstances they present in their petition, no matter how that person may have shown themselves to be redeemed, and no matter (if they're) no longer a threat to public safety," Daniels said. Daniels resigned from the board in January, one of six Democrats to step down or fail to be appointed since 2021. In the past few years, the state GOP has turned the board into a new front in the ongoing debate over criminal justice reform.

Democrats, who have a supermajority in the state Senate, have failed to muster enough support among their ranks to get Pritzker's appointments through, leaving the board with three vacant seats.

Pritzker declined an interview request.

In a statement, he acknowledged his administration has had a hard time recruiting potential board members because of the frayed political atmosphere around its work. "In today's political climate where supporting common-sense criminal justice reform has become a lightning rod, the Coleman Act's initial success should be seen as major progress in the right direction," he said. Coleman Act has 'failed to live up to its promise'

The day Pritzker signed the Coleman Act, its main sponsor, state Rep. Will Guzzardi, D-Chicago, said in a press release the law would transform Illinois' prison system and allow families to properly say goodbye to their loved ones.

"I'm sorry we couldn't afford this mercy to Joe Coleman, but I'm proud that we'll be able to do so for hundreds of other Illinoisans," Guzzardi said. Criminal justice reformers celebrated the Coleman Act as a model for other states to follow. In a report last year, FAMM, a prominent national advocacy group, said the Coleman Act was one of the strongest "compassionate release" laws in the country.

But so far, the act has "failed to live up to its promise," said Mary Price, FAMM's general counsel and the report's author.

Advocates want lawmakers to institute several changes to the Coleman Act to encourage the Prisoner Review Board to release more people.

Lawmakers should require board members to visit prison infirmaries to see firsthand the state of prison health care, advocates said. The board should also receive more training on how to evaluate the medical conditions of prisoners applying for release. Advocates also want the state to provide prisoners who are applying for medical release with an attorney to argue their case. Guzzardi said he'll advocate for funding for that in the upcoming fall legislative session.

Lawmakers should also allow prisoners to reapply for medical release sooner than currently allowed, said William Nissen, an attorney who represents prisoners pro bono, including on medical release requests. Prisoners denied medical release currently have to wait six months before they can reapply, unless they get a special exemption from the board. Shelton has only approved three out of 10 requests so far, according to figures provided by the board's chief legal counsel. "If you're representing a terminally ill person, then a large part of their remaining life is gone before you can even apply again," Nissen said.

Nissen said lawmakers should also require the board to explain why they denied a medical release to "instill a certain amount of discipline in the decision-making process." If board members have to articulate their reason for denying someone release, maybe they'll reconsider the decision, he said.

Phillip Merritt's attorney is in the process of refiling his medical release request. His brother Michael doesn't know whether he'll get out this time. And he hasn't been able to reach Phillip in three weeks—the cellmate who had helped facilitate the calls was apparently transferred. But he's certain he and his family can give Phillip a more humane send-off than any prison could. "At least he could go peacefully," he said.

dental insurance plans in their state to pay out at least 83% of their premium dollars on patient care. Due to extensive opposition from the insurance industry, this bill did not get passed during the current Illinois legislative session. The ISDS is resolute in their determination to advocate for dental patients in this matter. I will update you on their progress in the next legislative session. In the meantime, please feel free to share your support on the need for dental insurance reform with your state senators and representatives.

Pastor Rick Bader selected as Parade Grand Marshal

SUBMITTED PHOTO Rock Valley Publishing

This year's choice of Parade Grand Marshal is Pastor Rick Bader. Rick and his wife drove into Lena over 40 years ago as Rick was getting ready to start his first assignment after college. Since then, as head pastor of St. John's Lutheran church, Rick has been an important part of the lives of many people within his congregation. Along with his wife Alice, they raised their two children while watching the church grow. They were involved in the building of the new church at its current location. Pastor Bader's dedication to his family and his church is nothing short of amazing. The Lions Club would like to thank and honor Rick by selecting him as the 2023 Grand Marshal. Best of luck to Rick and Alice as they start this new chapter in their lives.
