Obituary

GERALD WOKER

Gerald Wayne Woker, 77, of Pearl City passed away July 13, 2024 at Stephenson Nursing Center in Freeport, IL. Gerald was born August 22, 1946, in Freeport to Wayne and Neva (Cheeseman) Woker. He was a 1964 graduate of Pearl City High School. In September of that year, his father passed away and Gerald began running the family farm to support his mother and younger brother. It was only a year later that he would meet the woman who would steal his heart. Gerald married Peggy Pacey on June 21, 1969, in Pearl City.

Gerald and Peg raised their family and farmed together until retiring from the dairy business in the spring of 2001. Shortly after the cows were gone, he began working at Spahn & Rose Lumber Company in Pearl City. He enjoyed working there and visiting with many coworkers, customers and friends daily.

Gerald enjoyed playing cards, mostly Euchre. He was always happy to tell a story or joke. He was a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, the former Pearl City Masonic Lodge, and Pearl City Historical Organization.

After Peg's passing on September 13, 2014, Gerald decided he wanted to return to the home farm. With the help of his son-in-law, Chris, he designed the perfect "Gramp Shack". He enjoyed nine years back on the farm until health reasons required his move to the nursing home.

Gerald will be missed by his son, Aaron Woker of Pearl City, daughters, Brenda Woker of DeKalb and Deanna (Chris) Fink of Lanark, granddaughters, Samantha and Katelyn Fink, sister, Karen (Merle) Endress of Chetek, WI, brother, Gary (Karen) Woker of Thomson, several nieces & nephews, and countless friends. He was greeted in Heaven by his wife, Peg; parents, Wayne Woker and Neva (Cheeseman) Woker-Edler; and close friends, Marvin Barklow and Richard Ferguson.

The family would like to thank the staff at Stephenson Nursing Center and FHN Hospice for their wonderful care of Gerald. Rich, Dakota and Denver Sargent cannot be thanked enough for all they have done for Gerald these last several years. Their friendship, helpfulness and patience will never be forgotten.

A memorial service led by Pastor David Schweppe was held at St. John's Lutheran Church in Pearl City, IL am 12 p.m. on Saturday, July 20, 2024. Internment took place at Chapel Hill Memorial Gardens in Freeport, IL. Cremation rites have been accorded. A memorial fund has been established.

After years of controversy, state pauses CO2 pipeline construction, for now

New law also lays out safety requirements for future carbon sequestration projects

By Andrew Adams

CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS

New safety requirements for carbon dioxide pipelines as well as a temporary ban on their construction are now in effect after Gov. JB Pritzker last week signed a bill that passed the General Assembly earlier this year.

The law issues new regulations for carbon capture and sequestration, a technology used to take carbon dioxide pollution and store it deep underground. Sandstone formations in central Illinois are uniquely suited for gas storage, which has attracted national attention to the region as a possible hub for carbon dioxide storage.

"We are essentially attempting to refossilize fossil fuels—put them back under the ground and keep them from going into the air and contributing to global warming," state Sen. Bill Cunningham, D-Chicago, said at a news conference. "That's very important work."

But some oppose the technology on environmental grounds while others say the pipelines used to transport carbon dioxide from where it's produced to storage sites brings the risk of catastrophic—and potentially lethal—failure.

"There are a range of opinions within the environmental community on carbon capture technology," Christine

Nannicelli of the Sierra Club Illinois chapter said during Thursday's bill signing. "That said, there is overwhelming agreement within our broad coalition on the need to have critical safeguards in place."

The legislation signed July 18, which was backed by the Sierra Club and other environmental groups, as well as business and organized labor groups, contains provisions that Nannicelli said are the "strongest carbon capture protections in the nation." It would put a moratorium on the construction of new carbon capture sites until July 1, 2026, unless the U.S. Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration finalizes new safety rules before then.

It requires developers of carbon capture projects to obtain state permits that require safety monitoring during a project's life cycle and for at least three decades after it finishes. It also requires that the projects result in a net reduction of greenhouse gases—satisfying some environmentalists who worry companies might end up contributing more pollution in building these projects than they would actually sequester.

Pritzker pitched the technology—and its regulation in Illinois—as a boon for the state's economic development.

"This bill adds carbon capture to the growing list of new and burgeoning industries being built right here in our state," Pritzker said.

This mirrored comments from business leaders such as Chris Cuddy, an executive at ADM, the Illinois-based company that operates the oldest large-scale carbon sequestration project in the U.S. "CCS is an enabler for job creation, innovation and economic growth and the more we do to support it, from this legislation to the building of critical infrastructure, the more this region and the state will benefit," Cuddy said.

In the legislature, the bill drew bipartisan criticism, as well as bipartisan support.

Republicans in the Statehouse generally opposed the bill, with many noting that no Republicans were involved in the final negotiations around its details. That's despite most carbon capture projects being located in rural areas which tend to vote for more conservative officials.

Multiple lawmakers also raised concerns over the potential risks to drinking water, notably the Mahomet Aquifer in central Illinois, the sole source of drinking water for hundreds of thousands of people around central Illinois.

"We based it on the science and the data and the modeling that we had access to," Rep. Ann Williams, D-Chicago, said when asked about the aquifer. "So (we) felt very comfortable about how we were providing safeguards to drill, not just through the aquifer, but anywhere in the state of Illinois."

While multiple projects have been proposed in Illinois, the largest—from companies Navigator CO2 and Wolf Carbon Solutions—were either canceled or stalled in the face of opposition from landowners and regulators.

One smaller project, from Gibson City-based One Earth Energy, was under consideration for a permit from the Illinois Commerce Commission, but the company requested that the case be pulled in June in anticipation of the bill signing. An administrative judge formally suspended considerations in the case on June 10.

"While this legislation sets some new requirements for our planned carbon capture system in Ford and McLean counties, it creates a path forward for carbon capture here in Illinois," Steve Kelly, president of One Earth Energy, said in a statement. "We're committed to meeting those standards set by our elected officials and we're excited to continue moving forward in this process."

Kelly added that the company plans to file new paperwork with the ICC when the moratorium is lifted.

Leading nonprofits join Albertsons Companies Foundation to tackle summer hunger

The Albertsons Companies Foundation on June 12 announced the launch of a new collective effort focused on addressing childhood hunger this summer.

By bringing together a coalition of leading nonprofit organizations, the first-of-its-kind initiative aims to drive awareness and boost participation in the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) new Summer Electronic Benefit Transfer for Children Program (Summer EBT), also known as SUN Bucks.

"Childhood hunger is a complex problem that requires partners from across the food system to come together and collaborate," said Christy

Duncan Anderson, president and executive director of Albertsons Companies Foundation. "Through the collective knowledge, expertise and extensive network of prominent nonprofits and the Albertsons Companies Foundation, we aim to connect with a greater number of families than we could individually."

For the millions of kids who rely on free or reduced-priced meals at school, summer can mean a lack of access to nutritious food. To help combat this, the USDA has launched Summer EBT, a new program available in 37 states, all five U.S. territories, and two tribes. The program will provide grocery benefits to low-income families with school-aged children during the summer months when school is out. Eligible families in participating states will receive $120 per eligible school-aged child to purchase groceries.

"We have advocated for the creation of a summer EBT program like SUN Bucks for more than a decade and we are thrilled that this program will be available to families facing food insecurity this summer," said Claire Babineaux-Fontenot, CEO of Feeding America. "Working alongside people facing hunger and partners like Albertsons Companies Foundation, we will make a real impact on summer hunger and lay the groundwork for more states to participate next year."

The Albertsons Companies Foundation's Nourishing Neighbors program together with an Advisory Group of leading players across the food system will work together to ensure as many families as possible benefit from the program in this critical first year.

The Advisory Group is comprised of representatives from Feeding America®, Food Research & Action Center, Gift Card Bank, Hunger Free America, mRelief, No Kid Hungry, Partnership for a Healthier America, and WhyHunger. This group reaches more than 200 foodbanks, 500 school districts and community organizations, and over 1500 partner organizations across the country.

"Summer is the hungriest time of the year for the millions of children who rely on school meals, and the rising costs of groceries means families are feeling the pinch even more," added Anne Filipic, CEO of Share Our Strength, the organization behind the No Kid Hungry campaign. "We believe that by joining Albertsons Companies Foundation and their partners, together we can get one step closer to ensuring every single child in America has the food they need to grow up healthy and strong."

Through a surround-sound approach designed to reach parents and caregivers online and in their communities, the initiative aims to ensure families have access to the information they need to learn how they can benefit from this new program.

In addition, the coalition launched a new website, SummerEBT.org, which gives families a simple, fast way to check if they are eligible and connect to their state sign-up site. For families that live in states that are not participating, the site directs them to other food resources, such as the USDA Summer Meals program, and enables them write to their elected representatives encouraging their state's participation next summer.

Illinois child tax credit: who gets it, how much is it?

$50 million tax credit program will provide up to roughly $300 for low-income families

By Andrew Adams
CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS

In the final hours of their spring legislative session, Illinois lawmakers approved a tax credit of up to about $300 for families with young children.

The credit is available to Illinoisans with children under age 12 who qualify for the federal Earned Income Tax Credit, or EITC. Although it has exceptions, that credit is generally available to married couples earning up to about $60,000 and single people earning up to about $50,000, depending on the number of children they have.

For taxes on 2024 income, the tax credit will cap at just over $300 for tax filers with three or more children who meet certain income requirements. Taxpayers with two children face a cap of about $270 and taxpayers with one child face a cap of about $170.

The child tax credit equates to 20 percent of the state's EITC, which allows Illinois taxpayers a credit equal to 20 percent of the federal EITC.

Starting in tax year 2025, the state's child tax credit will double to 40 percent of the state EITC, meaning that it will max out at a bit over $600 for families with three children. Because the federal tax credit that determines its size is tied to inflation, the actual size of future years' child tax credits is yet to be determined.

In its first year, the program is expected to cost the state $50 million, with a cost of about $100 million in subsequent years.

The idea of a permanent child tax credit in Illinois has been floated for several years, with various proposals being put forward by legislators in the General Assembly as well as advocacy groups and think tanks.

Gov. JB Pritzker pitched a child tax credit in his proposed budget earlier this year that was smaller than the version that passed in the final budget. It would have applied to children under three years old and cost about $12 million.

Proponents of the idea say that in addition to helping low-income families, programs like this help local economies.

"Every dollar we invest in the child tax credit is immediately spent locally," Erion Malasi, the policy director for Economic Security for Illinois, told Capitol News Illinois.

Researchers at the Illinois Economic Policy Institute, a labor movement-affiliated think tank, found in a January report that child tax credits have a higher economic impact than cuts to corporate income taxes or to capital gains taxes.

That report also cited several research teams that found the temporary expansion to the federal child tax credit between 2021 and 2023 reduced child poverty in the U.S. by between 25 and 36 percent. That credit provided an additional $1,000 per child on top of an existing $2,000 credit, with increases for younger children.

State Sen. Omar Aquino, D-Chicago, sponsored legislation that would have created a $300 million child tax credit program that was more expansive than the version that passed.

Aquino told Capitol News Illinois he will be watching the rollout of the child tax credit to see if there is room for an "expansion" in future budget years or if there is a route for the credit to be automatically applied for qualifying taxpayers.

The Illinois Department of Revenue is working on guidance for next year's filing season and will provide information about how to claim the child tax credit on its website.

The importance of playing with your kids

This morning I was listening to a guy online who was talking about how important the first three years are in the raising of our children. He mentioned that when we take the easy way out and give our children some kind of electronic device to occupy them, their childhood creativity is basically over. Electronic devices have such a powerful pull on the mind of a child that they give all their attention to the device and they begin to crave devices over natural play. I've seen this in my own grandchildren that whenever my phone begins to play music, they come running with great anticipation that they are going to be entertained and stimulated with something exciting. The guy I was listening to said that especially those first three years of life are for exploring the world around them and developing their own creativity with the natural things of life that have not been corrupted by tech. He said the most important thing, especially during those first three years of life, are relationships and interactions that take place between a child and their parents. The amount of play and uninterrupted time together at those young ages is directly related to the degree of security and emotional strength that your child has throughout their life. Those years are foundational, and it is so important that we prioritize time with our children without technology in order to help them explore all the creative juices they have. I thought the things he said were pretty good. I was blessed with great parents who always included family time, reading, games, play and prayer each and every day. It was a time before there were many electronic devices to draw kids in that was for sure. About all we had was transistor radios and walkie talkies. Times were simpler and our parents understood that the important things in life were not related to the

By JILL PERTLER
Columnist

When my kids were babies, I took lots of photos—always hoping to get the one perfect shot. This was during the prehistoric, pre-digital age, when cameras required film and film required developing. You couldn't take a million pictures and preview them on your screen. You had to send them away and pay to have them printed. One by one by one.

Back then, I couldn't tell a megapixel from a winning lottery ticket, but I knew I'd be able to recognize the perfect shot when I saw it. Trouble was, after hundreds of developed photos, I still hadn't seen it.

I burned through scores of 35 mm rolls, peering through the lens and giving thanks for the auto-flash feature. I paid attention to lighting and background. I even went through a black and white phase in the late 1990s and considered myself artistic for a month or two.

My babies had trouble cooperating with my photolistic tendencies. They squirmed and blinked and drooled and did the things normal kids do when their mom wants them to sit still and smile. My photos wound up off-center. We were haunted by red eye.

I brought the kids to professional photographers and the results were the same. They looked in the wrong direction. They fussed when we tried to get them to lie on their tummies with their chubby fists tucked under their equally chubby chins. Despite my acrobatic contortions to amuse, they refused to smile. After half an hour I was sweating and exhausted. Having your baby's photo taken is a workout.

We always left the studio with a few okay pictures, but not the perfect one. I gave thanks when nap time arrived. I was tired.

I continued to try (and try and try) hoping to get the perfect picture to include with our annual Christmas card. Just once. I didn't think it was too much to ask.

Instead, I got photos of my kids scowling and picking their noses. There's one of the three boys on Halloween where one son insisted on doing his silly face. There's the two oldest, on the front porch, where big sister is practically smothering her little brother so all but the top of his head is covered.

One son, who was the happiest of babies, cried wholeheartedly every time we tried to take a group shot with the cousins. We've got a whole series of him bawling.

Another son used to smile so big that his eyes shut. That went on for a couple of years. My daughter was a somber baby who hardly ever cracked a grin in front of the camera. At least she wasn't crying.

Somewhere right around baby number four I graduated to a digital camera with the ability to view thousands of pictures without ever having to print any. I figured my shot at the perfect shot increased to even odds.

In the dozen years since, I've taken many photos and have gotten better with practice. I don't have problems with red eye anymore and I learned tricks to increase the odds that everyone is looking toward the camera. I've even taken some pretty good pictures using my phone. Over time, I became less zealous, but I still pursued the one perfect shot—which I never got.

Yesterday, I came upon a pile of old, forgotten photos in the basement and leafed through them. My son, now 19, sat as a baby in his older cousin's lap. He was wailing. Another shot in black and white showed a baby girl, lying in serious contemplation on her daddy's chest.

There was one of the kids splashing in a mud puddle, all dirty and wet. Another of the boys carrying dandelions they'd picked for me; the oldest is giving the youngest a piggyback. Their faces are obscured, but their skin is tan with a warm summer glow and the dandelions are held carefully in tight little fists.

At the time the photos were taken, I saw my daughter and sons doing what they normally did, looking simply like themselves. I was oblivious to their depth and meaning. Now, all these years later, it's right there in front of me.

Letter to the editor

A letter from the Stockton School Board

Dear Stockton Community,
We are saddened by the passing of our esteemed school board member, Tamara Ruter. She served our community with dedication, passion, and unwavering commitment to the success and well-being of our students. Tamara's contributions have left a lasting mark on our district, and she will be greatly missed.

The Stockton Board of Education must fill the vacant seat to ensure the continued governance and oversight of our schools. We are seeking a dedicated and passionate individual to join our board and help us continue the work of advancing our educational mission. The appointee will serve until the election in April.

- The responsibilities of a school board member include:
- Participating in board meetings and discussions
 - Collaborating with fellow board members and the superintendent
 - Setting policies and strategic goals for the district
 - Overseeing the district's budget and financial health
 - Advocating for the needs and interested of our students and community

We encourage all interested and qualified individuals to apply. Candidates must be residents of the Stockton CUSD #206 and possess a genuine interest in the education and wellbeing of students.

To apply, please submit a letter of intent outlining your qualifications, experience, and reasons for wanting to serve on the school board and a current resume by Aug. 9, 2024. Applications can be submitted via email to james.bunting@stocktonschools.com or mailed to Stockton CUSD #206 Attn: James Bunting, 504 North Rush St., Stockton, IL, 61085.

The board will review all applications and conduct interviews with selected candidates. We aim to fill this position as promptly as possible to maintain the effective governance of our schools. Thank you for your continued support and commitment to the Stockton School District. Together we will honor Tamara's legacy by continuing to strive for excellence in education for all our students.

Sincerely,
Stockton School Board

almighty dollar and personal pleasure over the training and nurturing of their children. My parents' generation knew how important it was to protect their children from the things that would steal their innocence. They understood how important personal human interaction is when it comes to raising children and providing the stability they need to be emotionally secure and strong. As I look back, we never had a decent TV in the living room let alone in our bedrooms. We never had anything like a cell phone, an I-pad or tablet to transport us out of reality and into a world of illusion.

I grew up with a dad who worked very hard and was out in the fields or doing chores in the barn a lot during the day, but at night he was ours, even though he was tired out, he was ours. We loved to unlace his work shoes when he came through the door for supper at the end of the day. We wrestled, played games, sat on his lap for a book, and rubbed his back when he laid down on the living room floor to catch a quick rest. My Father-in-law was the same way with his family. He worked hard each and every day sometimes handling three jobs at the same time to pay the bills, but at the end of every day he loved to spend time playing with his kids.

In a perfect world we wouldn't be so preoccupied with our electronic devices, and we sure wouldn't be pushing them on our children. I know it's hard work to interact with your children and help them discover their own abilities and to also discover that there is a God who created them and wants to have a relationship with them instead of a relationship with electronics. Proverbs 22:6 says, Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old, he will not depart from it. Training involves protecting our children and helping them discover all that God has created them to be. Until next week, God bless.

During the last two decades, I took thousands of photos, always hoping for the perfect shot I never quite managed to get. Now I look back at the photos and realize it's true. I never got the one perfect picture. To the contrary, I got them all.

Jo Daviess County Farm Bureau offering $250 towards ROPS purchase

The Jo Daviess County Farm Bureau would like to offer funds to reimburse farmers for purchasing Rollover Protection Structure (ROPS). Fifty-five percent of farm tractors in Illinois do not have a cab or ROPS. Only one in five victims will survive a tractor rollover accident. The leading cause of farm related deaths in Illinois is tractor rollover accidents. They account for more than 30% of farm related deaths. ROPS help protect farmers and family members from being crushed in the event of a tractor turnover or rollover. Safety Chairman, Dan Robbe, states, "Safety is a priority of the farm bureau, and we would like to encourage our members to install ROPS on their tractors".

Jo Daviess County Farm Bureau members who purchase a ROPS could receive a reimbursement of $250 towards the purchase of a ROPS (there are six rebates available). To receive the $250, members need to bring in their paid invoice to the Farm Bureau office in Elizabeth. Customers are responsible for the cost, freight, and installation which are available through the dealer. If you have been thinking about putting a ROPS on one of your tractors, now is the time! For more information about this program, or to become a member of our organization, contact the Jo Daviess County Farm Bureau office at 815-858-2235 or email jdcfbmgr@gmail.com.

Pop tab collection

I have had a couple of people ask me recently if we still collect pop tabs for the Ronald McDonald House in Iowa City. The simple answer is "yes". We are happy to support a worthwhile cause that has benefited people from our area that have doctorate in Iowa City. In fact, earlier this week I made a delivery to drop off all the donated pop tabs this past year! If you have pop tabs that you would like to donate, please drop them off in any kind of container to the Jo Daviess County Farm Bureau office Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Family Farm signs

As we are nearing the end of summer, we all start thinking of back to school and the fall weather coming soon. There's still time to do some work around the farm and spruce things up a bit. Why not add a "This is a Family Farm" sign to your landscape? The signs are 17.5" X 23" and cost $30. Stop by our office and pick one up.

Farm Fun Fact

Americans today consume 17.3 billion quarts of popped popcorn each year. The average American eats about 68 quarts!

Picking the best tomato

It's tomato season, and tomatoes are making their appearance in backyard gardens and at the local farmer's markets. Tomatoes are versatile and found in countless entrees, side dishes, condiments, and beverages. If you are interested in learning more about which varieties of tomatoes work well in various dishes, why some have more flavor or are more watery than others, or are simply interested in discovering why tomatoes are good for you, join University of Illinois Extension for Harvesting a Rainbow of Tomatoes!

This class will discuss why tomatoes are a healthy addition to your diet, how to select, purchase, and prepare different varieties of tomatoes, which variety works better than others for making salsa, and how to store them to extend their shelf life. We will also share tasty recipes to try at home as you explore new flavors and discover what varieties of tomatoes work best for you.

Harvesting a Rainbow of Tomatoes! will be held Wednesday, Aug. 21, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the Freeport Public Library, 100 E Douglas St, Freeport, IL. Register for this program by calling the U of I Extension at 815- 235-4125 or visit us online at go.illinois.edu/jsw. Registration is $5.

If in need of reasonable accommodations to participate in this program, please call 815-235-4125.

Stephenson County Farm Bureau news

By Victoria Hansen

This past week both the Carroll County Farm Bureau and Stephenson County Farm Bureau Young Leader Committees held their pre-fair meetings. These groups are made up of individuals aged 18-35 years of age who are passionate about agriculture. These groups are always welcoming new members. If you are interested in learning more about how to get involved, please reach out to your county Farm Bureau. For the Carroll County Farm Bureau, call 815-244-3001 or email Carrollcfb@gmail.com, and for Stephenson County Farm Bureau, call 815-232-3186 or email manager@stephensoncfb.org.

Illinois Soybean Association and Stephenson County Farm Bureau

announce August townhall for Illinois farmers

The Illinois Soybean Association and Stephenson County Farm Bureau are set to host a town hall at the Stephenson County Farm Bureau Office for all to attend to hear about the latest policy development at both the federal and state levels. By providing farmers with updates on recent policy changes and looking into the future, ISA and SCFB ensures farmers are informed about factors that will affect their everyday lives. Key topics on the agenda include eminent domain and pipelines, ethanol/biofuels market, ESA/EPA herbicide and pesticide regulations.

This event is more than just an informational session. It is an opportunity to voice your concerns and thoughts as we head into the 2025 Legislative Year. Issues like herbicide and pesticide regulations, policies affecting market trends in the biofuels space, and eminent domain and pipelines will have direct implications for each individual farming operation and profitability. As a coalition, we are all stronger when we collectively voice our concerns and priorities. The feedback gathered during the town hall will be instrumental in educating legislators about the worries and foremost issues of the agricultural community. This will ensure that farmers' interests are well represented and that they continue to drive positive change in Illinois agriculture. Through informed dialogue and proactive engagement, farmers will continue driving positive change in Illinois agriculture.

Your participation is vital in shaping a sustainable and prosperous future for Illinois farming. If interested in attending, please RSVP by calling or texting Matthew Johnston at 309 846 4598.

Shots fired incidents

On July 21, at 1:58 a.m. an officer of the Freeport Police Department heard gunshots being fired in the 700 block of S. Liberty Avenue and the 800 block of S. Carroll Avenue. The gunshots generated a Sound Thinking alert in both of those areas. Officers responded to the areas and when they arrived, they located and collected evidence that showed a firearm had been discharged in both locations. There were no reported victims or property damage.

On July 21, at 3:17 a.m., an officer of the Freeport Police Department heard gunshots being fired in the unit block of W. Dexter Street. The gunshots also generated a Sound Thinking alert.

Officers responded to the area and when they arrived, they located and collected evidence that showed a firearm had been discharged in the area. There were no reported victims or property damage.

The Freeport Police department is asking anyone who has information regarding these incidents to contact either the Freeport Police Department at 815-235-8222, or Stateline Area Crime Stoppers at 866-TIPSNOW or through texting at Tip411.

SUDOKU

Fun by the Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test! Here's How It Works: Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

School dental exams

Summer is more than halfway over and parents across America are preparing their children for the upcoming school year. One of the most important things that should be on your to-do list is to schedule a dental exam. Every child deserves to enter school free of dental disease and pain, but unfortunately, this is not always the case.

Dental emergencies still rank as the number one reason for school absenteeism. Tooth decay and gum disease are infections. Attending school while your immune system is fighting an infection, and you are in pain, takes a toll on your child's academic performance. Statistically, children with poor oral health are much more likely to maintain a lower grade point average. Untreated dental disease also takes a toll on a child's feelings of self-esteem and self-confidence.

The purpose of a dental exam is to detect and treat any dental disease before it affects a child's health. While all children should receive routine dental exams, many will not see the inside of a dental office until their dental disease becomes an emergency. Since oral health directly impacts overall health, the state of Illinois requires that children entering kindergarten, second grade, sixth grade, and high school have a dental exam performed by a dentist.

Dental disease is not inevitable. In fact, it is completely avoidable. Unfortunately, 51 million school hours per year are lost because of oral disease. Parents lose countless work hours as well, as they transport their children from school to an emergency dental appointment. The following preventative measures are just some of the things that you can do to avoid being part of these statistics.

Flossing and brushing for two minutes, twice a day is the most effective way to promote dental health. Watch your child brush and floss, so you can see where they need guidance. If you need any assistance with teaching them a more effective technique, your dental team is happy to collaborate with you.

More teachers are recognizing the importance of dental care and will schedule time for their students to brush their teeth after lunch. If this is not the case in your child's class, teach them to rinse their mouth out after lunch. Make sure to pack a healthy lunch with crunchy vegetables, fresh fruit, cheese, and a reusable water bottle filled with fluoridated tap water. Do not pack juice drinks, soda, or sugary snacks that promote obesity and provide sugar for bacteria to feed on.

Many of our children go from school to extra-curricular activities or daycare. Teach your child to stay hydrated by drinking fluoridated water. Dry mouths breed harmful bacteria. Dehydration also leads to fatigue and irritability, neither of which contributes to academic or athletic performance. Staying hydrated with fluoridated water is one of the body's most reliable defenses against tooth decay and gum disease. Chewing sugarless gum and rehydrating with fluoridated tap water does not take the place of brushing, but it can help rinse food debris from the mouth and promote the production of saliva.

Instruct your child not to chew on pencils or their nails when they are nervous, as this can lead to lacerations and chipped teeth. If your child is participating in sports, make sure you prevent oral trauma by providing them with a mouthguard.

Many of our recent high school graduates are now preparing for life in a dorm. Starting college is one of life's big steps towards autonomy or being fully on your own. In all the excitement and change, it can be easy to overlook your dental health. Being diligent about routine dental exams, daily oral hygiene, and eating a healthy diet will serve you well as you enter this new stage of life. You do not get a second chance to make a first impression. Make sure your first impressions on campus, whether with roommates, new friends, professors, or potential dates, include a bright, healthy smile and fresh breath.

Ample sweet corn crop expected despite challenges

By Rhiannon Branch
FARMWEEK

As consumers look to add fresh sweet corn to their summer meals, a couple of Illinois producers say conditions have been right for a good crop this season.

John Bartman grows 2 to 5 acres of sweet corn near Marengo which is marketed at a roadside stand in McHenry County and sold to local restaurants.

He said it will be another week or two before the crop is ready to harvest, but conditions were good during pollination.

"We've been very fortunate," he told FarmWeek. "Our rains have been timely and adequate."

He is looking forward to a favorable crop.

"It's looking very healthy and has very good color," he said.

Farther south in Marion County, Vernon Quandt has harvested a few batches of his 5-acre crop and reported similar results.

"It's definitely been a good crop this year."

Quandt said he sells his sweet corn at a weekly farmer's market and has repeat customers who buy directly from the farm throughout the summer.

"We plant 11 or 12 different times, so it's staggered all the way through the year, which makes it more manageable," he said.

While the planting season for field corn was delayed, Quandt said his sweet corn stayed on track, especially since it is fully irrigated.

"I started in the middle of March and the first two batches went in really good," he said. "I like to plant it every 7 or 8 days and it may have been 10 or 11 days in between a couple of them because it was raining a lot, but it really didn't hamper me bad at all."

He said there were a few times he planted into less-than-ideal soil conditions but knows the variety he chose has proven success with emergence and early growth.

However, the season has not come without challenges. Both Bartman and Quandt cited raccoons as one of the biggest threats to sweet corn this year.

"They're unbelievable," Bartman said. "They truly do live up to those masks that they have over their eyes. They certainly are bandits."

Quandt said it is additional work and expense to put electric fencing around each of his patches, but it is necessary to control the raccoons and deer.

Aside from the varmints, Bartman said he is keeping a close eye on earworm pressure as harvest approaches, while Quandt expressed worry about potential wind damage as the tropical storm season unfolds.

On party infighting, Illinois' new GOP chair says 'start calling those people out'

By Hannah Meisel
CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS

In the parlance of Washington D.C. Republican strategists, deep-blue Illinois is sometimes referred to as an "orphan" state—along with other Democratic strongholds like California, New York and Hawaii.

In both 2016 and 2020, Donald Trump lost Illinois in the presidential election by 17 percentage points, while Republicans haven't won a single statewide election in a decade. And thanks in part to electoral maps drawn by Democrats who control the General Assembly, Democrats are in the supermajority in the state legislature and Republicans only hold three of Illinois' 17 congressional seats.

But amid promises to "make Illinois red again," the Illinois GOP's chair-elect Kathy Salvi invoked the analogy of parenting the beleaguered party in a speech to GOP delegates last week in Milwaukee for the Republican National Convention.

"Remember, I'm the mother of six children," Salvi said, reiterating a well-worn line from her unsuccessful campaign for U.S. Senate in 2022. "Seven now—the Illinois Republican Party."

Salvi, who officially assumed the party chair role on July 19 after the RNC wrapped up, was elected after outgoing chair Don Tracy last month announced his resignation citing Republican "infighting."

Tracy has declined to elaborate on the party's internal dynamics that led to his resignation—or how to fix them—and told Capitol News Illinois he'd let the letter "speak for itself."

In the letter, he wrote: "In better days, Illinois Republicans came together after tough intra party elections. Now however, we have Republicans who would rather fight other Republicans than engage in the harder work of defeating incumbent Democrats by convincing swing voters to vote Republican."

But Salvi referenced the fissures in her address to the party at its daily RNC breakfast meeting July 17, recalling how she'd settle squabbles between her children when they were young.

"If each one of us looks at what we're accountable for in our words and our actions—I think all of us here need to start calling those people out," she said of those who might let disagreements interfere with the party's ultimate goals.

"Listen, I love this party because sometimes we air our dirty laundry with one another and it gets into the press of these fine people," she added, referring to reporters in the room. "But we need to say, 'You know, let's give that person the benefit of a new fresh day.' And that's how we will win elections here in Illinois."

Salvi was not the only Republican figure who likened the state party to kin.

"We are a family. I love you," House Republican Leader Tony McCombie, R-Savanna, told delegates as she addressed the break-fast. "Let's not waste any more time debating our differences but concentrate on the Democrats where the(ir) policies are hurting Illinois."

McCombie acknowledged Democrats will continue to outspend Republicans and said Illinois Democrats drew the "worst partisan gerrymandered map in the nation," which makes GOP victories in the legislature an uphill battle. But she said she's still optimistic Republicans can win five Illinois U.S. House seats in November.

And though McCombie has only been in her position as House minority leader since January 2023, she told delegates she called Salvi to offer some wisdom she's picked up in that time.

"I said, 'This is going to be so hard. And you need to put people around you that are going to tell you no,'" McCombie said with a laugh.
